$3,000,000 Rain Saves Nearby Crops From Ruin

Corn and Tobacco Losses Are Cut as Downpour Soaks Va. and Md. Counties

A $3,000,000 rain fell on Washington and surrounding country last night, bringing at least temporary relief to drought-ravaged areas in nearby Maryland and Virginia counties.

Should the rain continue today, authorities said, more than $3,000,000 worth of tobacco and corn, given up as lost because of the six-week dry spell, would still be saved in Prince Georges and Montgomery counties (Md.), and northern Virginia.

The Weather Bureau last night predicted rain until noon today in Washington, Virginia and Maryland, with showers tomorrow.

W. R. C. Connick, president of the Prince George County Farm Bureau, declared the rain might cut tobacco crop losses from an expected $3,000,000 to about $2,000,000. Three weeks ago the crop had been estimated at $6,000,000, but the continued rainless spell had cut the valuation in half.

Saving of Corn Seen

O. W. Anderson, agricultural extension service agent for Montgomery County, foreaw a $1,000,000 savings in corn crops, pasturage and hay in the county if the rain keeps up today. Although 25 per cent of the corn has been damaged, he said, a good rain will save the pasture grass, vegetable crops and seeding for next year's hay.

Last night's rain was worth a half-million dollars to Fairfax County, Va., said County Agent A. E. Beard. Fairfax, he said, had not had any rain in ten days, and the corn had reached a "critical stage."

Beard said the rain probably had produced greater benefits in neighboring Loudoun County, which was more seriously struck by the drought, and in Prince William County.

Parts of Maryland have not had a ground-soaking rain for more than 100 days, Anne Arundel County and northern Prince Georges being particularly hard hit. While local showers had sprinkled portions of the southern Maryland counties, the last crop-helping downpour feel six weeks ago. Since then, a blistering sun and temperatures well above 90 have withered crops and pasturage.

This year's drought, Connick and Anderson agreed, is the worst since 1930.

Despite the fact that last night's drenching downpour was believed to have broken the dry spell, the weather man offered little hope in a lasting break in the heat wave in the Washington area.

It's the Humidity Here

Yesterday Washington should have enjoyed its coolest day of the month, for the mercury rose to a top of 85, but few were able to take advantage of the comparatively low temperature since the humidity was abnormally high, ranging between showers from .89 to .79. Normal humidity would have been .40.

The drop in temperature made so little impression that several Government offices, including the Coast Guard and the Alcohol Tax Unit, excused employes before the end of the regular day's work.

Cloudy skies will follow today's rain, the Weather Bureau said last rain, the Weather Bureau said, but the mercury is due to rise again after brief rainy respite of last night.

AFL Defers Ruling In Actors' Fight Until October 30

Atlantic City, N. J., Aug. 18 (AP).—Efforts of the American Federation of Labor to settle a jurisdictional dispute among actors' unions blew up tonight, with President William Green of the A. F. of L. announcing they would not be resumed until the federation holds its national convention in Cincinnati October 30.

The Associated Actors and Artistes of America (4-A) had called on the A. F. of L. to force the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes (I. A. T. S. E.) to revoke the charter it gave to the American Federation of Actors after the 4-A expelled the union of vaudeville and circus performers.

The A. F. of L. last week ordered the I. A. T. S. E. to revoke the charter and also proposed that the 4-A take back the A. F. A., headed by Sophie Tucker.

13 Years of Service as Policewoman Will Be Rewarded With Promotion September 1; Mrs. Phythian Also Runs Happy Home

It's only a short step from teaching school to doing police work, according to Mrs. Pearl D. Phythian, who will be promoted September 1 to be a precinct detective and become the District's "only woman detective."

She succeeds Mrs. Cecelia H. Clarke, who will retire after 25 years of meritorious work in District police duty.

Mrs. Phythian, who is 5 feet 4 inches tall and weighs 164 pounds, but admits only 140, had no intention of entering police work when she was teaching school down at Cleburne, Tex., 13 years ago. Sociology and problem children were her special interests and when she came to Washington she found herself gravitating to the same line of work.

"The problem of social misfits extends far beyond the school," said the 39-year-old policewoman. "The most important service a police officer can offer is to help adjust people to their social problems."

C. I. O. Faction Wins Packard Election, 4-1

Homer Martin's A. F. L. Division Is Beaten As Bargaining Agent

By the United Press.

Detroit, Aug. 18.—The first major bargaining election in the automotive industry since the United Automobile Workers split into two factions tonight gave the C. I. O. group a 4-to-1 victory over the A. F. L. division led by Homer Martin.

Results of a consent election among employes of the Packard Motor Car Co. were announced by the regional National Labor Relations Board here as follows:

U. A. W. affiliated with the Congress of Industrial Organizations, 6,000.

U. A. W. affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, 1,547.

For neither union, 637.

The election, held yesterday by consent of the two unions and the company, was agreed upon two weeks ago after the C. I. O. faction took a favorable strike vote.

The Packard vote was the first of four major bargaining elections scheduled in the industry. Elections also have been ordered among Chrysler, Briggs Manufacturing Co., and Motor Products employes. In each, the factional fight of the union precipitated dissension and each election order followed a strike.

Capital Firm Low Bidder on Health Center

But Price Is Above Estimate; St. Louis Bid Wins Sewer Job

John W. Hunt, of this city, submitted a low bid of $203,700 for the Southwest health center and Stiers Bros. and Co., of St. Louis, the low bid of $801,620 for the first westside section of the Rock Creek diversion sewer, it was announced yesterday.

Since the low bid on the health center exceeded $200,000, the amount alloted for the structure, District officials refused comment on the contract award.

The sewer project, which is being financed under a $3,500,000 Public Works allotment, is the first section on the west side of the creek to be slated for construction. The east side now is being built.

Site for the health center is First and H streets southwest. Clinics will be provided for venereal, tubercular and dental patients, as well as a station for maternal and child welfare.

The Southwest center is the first of a series contemplated by Health Officer George C. Ruhland. He has plans for more centers in the Northeast, central Northwest and Georgetown sections of the city.

Buchman Visits Mae West; Discusses Oxford Movement

By the United Press.

Hollywood, Aug. 18.—Have you heard the one about Mae West and the parson? Well . . .

Mae invited him to come up and see her and he did.

"Oh, hello, doctor," she welcomed the Rev. Dr. Frank Buchman, as only Mae West can.

Dr. Buchman, head of the Oxford movement, had been spreading the gospel of world moral rearmament in California.

He temporarily was baffled at sight of the blonde actress reclining on a couch. On the wall directly above hung an oil painting of her—in the nude.

He recovered though, and smilingly posed with her on the couch. Then before he could assemble his rearmament data, he was asked to pose with Miss West beside her huge grand piano. What he saw thereon jolted the cleric perceptibly. It was the famous silver statuette of Miss West, again in the nude.

"Have you met W. C. Fields yet?" she asked. "You should. Moral rearmament is just the thing he needs. Give it to him in a bottle and he'll go for it."

"That's okay," Fields confirmed later. "I'll take anything in a bottle."

"I owe all my success to the kind of thinking moral rearmament is," said Mae.

"You are a wonderful woman, Miss West," replied the cleric. "You have done wonderful things."

She told him it was her birthday.

"If I find the time I would like to write you a poem on the occasion of your birthday," he said.

And with that, the slightly confused former Pennsylvanian was escorted to his automobile by Miss West.

2,500 Made Idle Here by Gravel Strike

Parley Fails to End Walkout of 200; Tie-up of Materials Paralyzes Building

It was conservatively estimated yesterday that upward of 2,500 District building tradesmen and laborers were jobless because the sand and gravel strike has, in effect, placed an embargo on concrete and building sand and thereby paralyzed construction. Only 200 workmen, employes of the Smoot Sand & Gravel Co., are on strike.

A 2½-hour conference ended late yesterday with no tangible progress made toward a settlement of the walkout, which was called by the union last Sunday to enforce demands for shorter hours and higher wages.

Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, District highway director, revealed that 1,000 laborers and mechanics on paving and miscellaneous street improvement projects were out of work because they could not get concrete, and the District PWA estimated 400 were idle on the Municipal Center and Rock Creek sewer diversion jobs.

Feelings Called Friendlier

At least 1,000 more workmen were thought to be idle on Federal and private construction, ranging in size from the huge Social Security Building down to private homes in the suburbs.

"Some progress was made today," said Howard T. Colvin, Labor Department conciliator, who arranged the conference, "if it only consisted of bringing about friendlier feelings."

There is virtually no hope of a settlement before next week, he asserted, explaining that after conferring separately with officials of the union and the company, he expects to schedule another joint meeting Monday or Tuesday.

No Lawyers Present

No lawyers were present at yesterday's meeting, held at the Smoot firm's main office on the K street waterfront in Georgetown. A peace conference at the same place Thursday ended in failure when Smoot representatives objected to the presence of legal counsel in the workers' delegation.

Capt. Whitehurst reported that approximately one-half of the street paving work now under contract was at a standstill, due to stoppage of supplies.

"The hardship of the strike rests heavily on these men who have no connection with the strike," he said. "Many of the 1,000 men who have had to lay down their tools on District highway projects live from hand to mouth at best, and if this thing continues they undoubtedly

Girl Cancels Duel, But Warns Men Not to Get Fresh

Chone, Ecuador, Aug. 18 (U.P.).—Lissome Betty Barberan tonight was willing to call off her duel with Ruben Lopez Ochoa, but warned that if any of the town's males get fresh with her in the future, they must be prepared to fight.

The shapely, blue-eyed normal school student, who challenged Lopez because of "certain insults" he had directed at her "without consideration for my honor, age or sex," said she had accepted his explanation. But she made it perfectly clear she fears no man—at least in Chone.

"Would you have the nerve to kill a man in a duel?" she was asked.

Betty smiled, but nodded affirmatively.

16 Hurt When Bus Skids Off Curve

Peoria, Ill., Aug. 18 (AP).—Sixteen passengers were injured today, five seriously, when a Transcontinental bus skidded on a hill curve near Kingston Mines and plunged into a field, where it toppled on its side.

The bus, property of the Santa Fe Trailways, was en route from Kansas City to Chicago. Authorities were told it was proceeding slowly through a rainstorm when it reached the curve, where the rain had washed quantities of mud down the hillside onto the highway.

Mussolini and Ciano Confer With Czaky; Loyalty to Axis Is Said to Be Topic

By the Associated Press

Rome, Aug. 18.—Premier Mussolini and Foreign Minister Count Ciano conferred tonight with Foreign Minister Count Csaky of Hungary.

Their talk followed long conversations between Ciano and Csaky and presumably dealt with the part that Hungary, friend of the Rome-Berlin axis, will play if war breaks upon Europe.

That Ciano and Csaky went to Mussolini was accepted in Italian circles as meaning their conversations had led to something conclusive.

Arrived by Plane

The Hungarian arrived suddenly this afternoon by plane from Munich after conversations with the German foreign minister, Von Ribbentrop.

As tension over Danzig mounted, Italian newspapers extolled Hungarian loyalty to the axis.

Hungarian friendship admittedly would be of great importance if war comes.

While the Csaky visit was described officially as "a private trip," qualified informants admitted privately that it was "in connection with the international situation."

During the day, deepening pessimism was discernible both in diplomatic circles and among the general public. Newspapers announced in large headlines that the "democracies" had received their "last warning."

Friendship for Poles Held Stated

Budapest, Aug. 18 (AP).—The Hungarian government continued tonight to shroud Foreign Minister Csaky's movements in the strictest secrecy.

But diplomats were sure of one thing—that Csaky, in his talks to Germany and Italy, reiterated Hungary's friendship for Poland.

It can be taken for granted, diplomats said, that Csaky expounded this country's will to remain apart from any action unfriendly to the Warsaw government, despite Hungary's membership in the anti-Comintern pact

"Mapped Course" Followed

Berlin (Saturday), Aug. 19 (AP).—Quarters close to the foreign office said early today that developments in Slovakia were "following the course mapped out when the country arranged for and received German protection."

Officials declined to say precisely what the "course" was to be.

Ford Calls NLRB Ruling 'Invasion Of Free Speech'

Detroit, Aug. 18 (AP).—The Ford Motor Co. coupled an assertion that a National Labor Relations Board order "is an invasion of the constitutional right of free speech" with a formal refusal today to reinstate 24 men the board alleged were dismissed because of union activities.

The board's order to rehire the 24 employes and to refrain from "disparaging or criticizing" labor organizations is "unjustified by the facts," the company stated in an answer filed with the NLRB office here by Louis J. Collombo, Ford attorney.

Frank R. Bowen, NLRB regional director, said tonight he did not know the board's next action in the case. If an enforcement order against the Ford company is sought, he said, it would have to be obtained through the United States Circuit Court of Appeals.

'Border Incident' Reported by Nazis

Berlin, Aug. 18 (DNB).—DNB, official German agency, tonight reported a "border incident" on the Franco-German frontier at Leidingen in the Saar region.

The "incident" occurred yesterday afternoon, according to DNB, when two German army officials crossed the international border by mistake and were accosted by a French customs guard.

Immorality in Bund Charged by Girl, 19

Brooklyn Brunet Testifies Youth Leaders Told, on Trip to Germany, That Nazis Plan to "Turn to America"

By Robert C. Albright

A plump 19-year-old brunette, former youth unit leader in the German-American bund, yesterday unfolded before the Dies un-American investigating committee a tale of alleged "imorality" in bund camps and propaganda ties between the bund and the Nazi German government.

Helen Vooros, who said she quit the bund in disgust after she witnessed immoral incidents and was annoyed and threatened with attack by a Brooklyn bund youth leader, told of a bund-financed trip to Germany, and training of selected German-American youths in anti-Semitic, anti-Catholic, anti-Masonic doctrines.

"We were taught that national socialism was a religion and we didn't need any other," she told the committee.

Aim at America, She Says

Criticism of communism was soft pedaled in Germany, she testified, and "one official of the German propaganda ministry told us that national socialism was a higher communism."

The raven-haired Brooklyn girl, a willing witness, said that 30 German-American youths were informed on their visit to Germany last year the Germans would "turn to America" in 10 to 20 years after Germany "got everything back she had lost."

Her testimony was in sharp conflict with that of Fritz Kuhn, German-American Bund "fuehrer," who appeared before the committee Wednesday and Thursday. Asked if Kuhn might be called back, Chairman Dies said: "We're not through with him yet."

The "immorality" charges, she said, related to incidents at the German-American bund's Camp Nordland, at Andover, N. J., at Camp Siegfried, Long Island, and on the S. S. Hamburg while the Bund youth delegation was en route to Germany last year.

At the camps, she said, "boys and girls did things they shouldn't do." Quarters of the girls and boys, she

Colonel Weds At 116; Bride A 'Child' of 65

Mexico City, Aug. 18 (INS).—A new type of "child marriage" took place today when Col. Luis Flores Lopez took as his bride Agrippina Tovar Ramirez. He gave his age as 116. The bride is only 65.

The colonel is a veteran of the Franco-Mexican war of 1862, now retired, and today's marriage was his fourth. His first marriage occurred in 1846, when he was 23.

Ickes Hints Steps to Block Retail Gasoline Price Rise

By the Associated Press

Tulsa, Okla., Aug. 18.—Gasoline prices at the refinery moved upward today under the effects of a six-State shutdown of crude oil production.

The retail price at filling stations remained unchanged, market men said, and they expected no change would be felt until after the stoppage of crude production was lifted. Then, they said, retail prices would go up if refinery prices held their gains.

The market for gasoline at the refinery was strong, with jobbers seeking supplies to protect their territories. Many smaller refineries were reluctant to make commitments for the same reason.

"It's a refiners' market for the first time in a long time," said one refiner. "The published price has gone up an eighth of a cent a gallon, but in reality it's up a half cent or more, there is no gasoline going at subnormal prices and we don't have to give any discounts in this market."

Meanwhile in Washington Secretary Ickes intimated he might be forced to suspend temporarily the Connally hot oil act limiting interstate movement of petroleum should the current shutdown of oil wells in six producing States result in a gasoline shortage and an increase in the retail price of motor fuel.

He called attention in a statement to the fact that section 4 of the Connally act provided that the limitation on shipments could be lifted "should the supply of petroleum and petroleum products moving in interstate commerce become so limited as to cause a lack of parity between supply and consumptive demand."

"Should there develop a lack of Bratislava, Slovakia, A...

The Bratislava radio stati... nounced tonight that "owing ... existing situation," Germany ... taken military possession of ... vakia.

The announcement, for reason unexplained, was made in English—a language which most of Slovakia's 2,600,000 inhabitants do not understand.

[In Warsaw a government decree was published today (Saturday) authorizing up to $28,275,000 in new defense preparations, to be guaranteed by resources and credits of the national treasury, the United Press announced.

[At the same time it was announced that the French government has granted Poland credits of $430,000,000 francs ($11,395,000) for the purchase of extensive war supplies and munitions from France.

Total of $49,395,000

[The French credits, agreed upon in Paris Friday in a conference between French Foreign Minister Georges Bonnet and Polish Ambassador Jules Lukasiewicz, supplement $38,000,000 in British export credits granted to Poland recently from a $300,000,000 British "war chest" for the benefit of friendly nations.—Editor's note.]

It was learned from reliable sources that a military agreement, which was ratified today between Slovakia and Germany, places the little Slovak army of 30,000 and 300,000 reservists under German command.

Alarming rumors which had circulated through the capital all day, seemed verified tonight.

Germans In Command

These were:

A German military governor will assume control in Bratislava, the capital.

Expanded operations by German troops in Slovak territory, near the Polish border.

Gen. Ferdinand Csatlos, Slovakia's minister of war, has threatened to resign as a protest against domination of Slovak armed forces.

The Slovak national council has virtually surrendered its authority over internal affairs to German leaders, who only last March guaranteed Slovakia's independence for 25 years.

[All Jewish newspapers and two Czech publications have been prohibited in Slovakia, according to a Reuter News Agency dispatch from Bratislava, the International News said.

[The Slovak Parliament is expected to pass stringent anti-Semitic laws at its session next week, patterned after similar laws in Bohemia-Moravia.—Editor's note.]

Slovakia's frontier extends 200 miles along the southern border of Poland, giving German troops a chance at a wide-swinging flank attack on Polish industrial centers in south central Poland. The area of Slovakia is about 14,000 square miles. It became an independent republic on the eve of Czecho-Slovakia's break-up.

The propaganda department said the pact was secretly negotiated several months ago and that it clearly defined the German military zone by which Germany could "defend" Slovakia.

Between Cadca and Zilina, about 15 miles, civilian motor traffic was repeatedly interrupted by the movement of soldiers. Cadca is on the Polish border in the Jablunka Pass south of Teschen.

A. F. L. Urges Roosevelt to Spur Business

Co-operative Program, Under Administration Leadership, Is Proposed

By the Associated Press

The American Federation of Labor called upon the Roosevelt Administration yesterday to take the lead in a co-operative effort by business, labor, farmers and other groups to increase the Nation's production and living standards immediately.

Although outlining no particular method for the Government, the Federation presumably had in mind conferences of leaders in the different fields, at which agreements to raise production would be sought.

"If business does not expand substantially before next spring, we shall have a further demand for Government spending, with its danger of inflation and consequent losses to wage earners," the A. F. of L. said in its monthly survey of business.

Action Urgently Needed

"Action for business expansion on a sound basis is therefore urgent. Shall we advance on a co-operative basis, providing for the needs of all groups, or shall we accept Government domination?"

The labor organization said experts contended production increases could be planned for the country as a whole, but that businessmen were not apt to take the initiative in the direction of expansion because business risks were greater and profits smaller than in predepression years.

"Today," the survey continued, "the chance of succeeding in business is said to be only about 50 per cent as great as in predepression years, and the rewards of success are about 20 per cent less. In addition, those who have succeeded are forced to give a larger part of their income to the Government through increased income taxes. This explains why venture capital runs to shelter in safe and tax free investments like Government bonds. Our great need today is to give business men the kind of assurance which will enable them to look forward to the future with confidence."

Now Up to Business

The federation said that Congress, by defeating the Administration's big lending bill, had overruled the "pumpriming" policy on which the Government had relied to stimulate recovery and had placed the responsibility of reviving business "squarely on the shoulders of the nation's businessmen."

But it added, "although everyone is concerned in this problem of expanding production," businessmen seemed "as helpless as anyone else" in finding the way to achieve it.

The National Association of Manufacturers was clearly not ready to accept the challenge of Congress, the A. F. L. said, but appeared to be waiting for legislation "to weaken the National Labor Relations Act."

"If this is typical of business leadership," the survey continued, "we can expect little help from industry, on its own initiative, toward immediate increase of production. The National Labor Relations Act cannot safely be weakened."

Gold Release Urged

Burlington, Vt., Aug. 18 (AP).—Thomas M. McNeice, of the General Motors Export Corporation, tonight recommended the release of gold now held in bank vaults as a means of achieving a balanced price level.

McNeice spoke at a meeting of agricultural and industrial leaders, discussing ways of bringing about a balanced price level to insure farmers better prices for their products.

Releasing gold, McNeice said, would cause commodity prices to rise, bringing a more balanced price level than now exists.

He suggested a more equitable distribution of gold would be beneficial to the United States. This could be achieved, he declared, by importing more goods and paying in gold. Such a policy, he asserted, would increase the standard of living in this country.

Dickinson Claims Victory in 1-Day Slot-Machine War

Lansing, Mich., Aug. 18 (AP).—Gov. Luren D. Dickinson, claiming that "slot machines have been driven to cover" in a one-day drive by State police, turned enforcement of gambling laws back to county officials tonight with a warning that it "is their plain duty."

"I shall not hesitate to take further action if any of them fail to live up to it," the 80-year-old crusader against vice and "high life" drinking asserted.

Dickinson, who returned to the Michigan capital today from his vacation cottage, hailed the seizure of 56 slot machines by State police acting on his orders as evidence that "there has been a general cessation of this form of gambling."

C. I. O. Willing To Negotiate With Armour

By the United Press.

Van A. Bittner, chairman of the C. I. O.'s Packinghouse Workers Organizing Committee, announced last night that his union is willing to negotiate with Armour & Co. on a plant-by-plant basis provided the company states in advance that it will enter into written contracts when agreements are reached.

His announcement, which he described as "a concession to prevent a strike," came after a lengthy conference with Secretary of Labor Perkins, who earlier had made settlements proposals at two confeences with four top-ranking officers of the Armour firm.

The C I. O. leader said his group had receded from its demand for a single national agreement "in the interests of ourselves because we don't want to strike unless it is absolutely necessary." A strike of 50,000 Armour workmen had been threatened before Labor Day by the C. I. O.

"But if the company doesn't agree to sign a contract there will be a strike," Bittner told reporters. He added, "You can say that for me."

Immorality in Bund Charged by Girl In Testimony Before Dies Committee

said, were only about 30 feet apart. She declared that once, when threatened with attack, she went to Theodore Dinkelacker, leader of the youth movement, who said: "What's the matter? Can't you take it?" She said Dinkelacker cautioned against talking and "told us to be more careful" and to "hide better."

Miss Vooros said that when 15 girls and 15 boys selected for training in Nazi culture were six days out en route to Germany, the 42-year-old Dinkelacker was found with a 17-year-old Bronx girl. She said some in the party called a meeting, but were advised not to talk about it.

"That's an amazing state of affairs," said Dies, when she told of the camp incidents. Dies said Hitler in "Mein Kampf," opposed "immorality."

"They told us this was pure and noble," said the witness.

Telling of the bund youth trip to Germany, she testified:

That two former Harvard students in the party, Herbert Mai and Paul Oschajsk, operated short wave radio sets in this country and had frequently communicated with Hugo Haas, former German-American bund member now with the Foreign Institute in Stuttgart, Germany.

Carried Secret Package

That most German passenger vessels traveling between the United States and Germany have aboard a "political leader" and a "propaganda leader" who maintain "contact" between the bund and the Nazi government; that she carried a secret "package" to the political contact man on her trip abroad, and saw another delivered on her return trip.

That in training camps in Germany, bund youths were taught Hitler "its the fuehrer of Germans everywhere," that children of Germans married to Jews must be sterilized, that German speech in the United States must be encouraged and the German population increased.

That the youths were told Germany was "going to get everything back that she lost"—first Austria, "and they got that"; then Czecho-Slovakia, "and they got that"; then Danzig and the Polish Corridor, then the African colonies, then the Scandinavian countries, "and then they would turn to America."

That she was selected with a few others after an examination to remain in Germany for a longer training course, but said she had hurt her foot and was allowed to return; that one of the group, Franz Nicolay, remained behind for an eight-month course in short wave radio.

German-born, Miss Vooros said she entered this country in 1926 at New York, and is now a naturalized citizen. Although the daughter of a German mother and a Greek father, she said she was permitted to join the bund "because of her strong German feelings," but did not know it was a Nazi agency.

At morning hearings, the witness appeared in a black and white ensemble, but changed during the recess to the bund youth uniform, which she said was the same as that worn by the Nazi youth—blue skirt, white blouse, brown tie clasped by a red and white cord which she said was the symbol of leadership. She displayed a white swastika which she said was used on jackets.

In Germany, she said Nazi officials told the youths that Fritz Kuhn was regarded "as our fuehrer in America." The American youth group's first glimpse of Hitler, she testified, was at the Olympic Stadium on May 1. Hitler turned to the bund party and saluted, and they returned the salute, she said.

Flattered By Goebbels

Miss Vooros said she noticed Propaganda Minister Goebbels looking at her very closely and she supposed it was because "I wasn't blonde like the others." But when Goebbels smiled at her, she said she smiled back "and felt very flattered." She said those selected for the longer training course were told that if they remained they would meet Hitler and Goebbels "personally."

During six weeks of training at a camp outside Berlin, the witness said, speakers "ridiculed generally the Christian religion" in addition to telling them that "Jews were like colored persons" and that "the Masons seek to ruin everyone." She said they were handed anti-Catholic pamphlets.

"We were told that we should always remember we are Germans wherever we were; that the reason England had gotten where it had was because the English in all lands always remembered their home country," she said. "They criticized everything pertaining to America. They seemed particularly interested in the boys from Harvard, and told the girls they should become teachers, because that was the best way to spread propaganda."

When Rhea Whitley, committee counsel, asked if she had summed up all the youth group was taught, she shook her head.

Race Growth Urged

"There was all this immorality, which I couldn't get used to. We were told it was pure and noble, and that a girl shouldn't feel ashamed of having an illegitimate child. They said in Germany they had mother and child shelters to raise children. They said that we girls should grow up to raise children—that was all we were for—so the German population could grow.

"You were told that intercourse between Germans was all right, but intercourse with any other race was vile?" asked Representative Mason (Republican), of Illinois.

"Yes," said the witness.

Returning to this country in a group of three, she said Hugo Haas gave her and two others "40 or 50" books apiece, to turn over to bund leaders in this country, and told them to tell customs officials they were for their own library. She said she was asked to conceal six German youth uniforms under the books, and deliver them to Erika Hagenbusch, leader of the women's bund youth movement in this country.

Warned to Be Secretive

She testified the youths were cautioned to say it was a "pleasure" trip and were warned against disclosing details to friends or relatives. Letters written and received in Germany were censored, and once Haas objected to clippings sent her by her mother, criticizing Kuhn's activities.

Miss Vooros said one, Frederick Vandenbergh, South Brooklyn bund youth leader, was the first to make unwanted advances to her, later wrote her "disgusting" letters in Germany, and continued to "annoy" her after her return. After Vandenbergh's first advances at camp, she said, she went home. She said she decided before she left for Germany to break with the bund, but "went along for the trip."

Back in New York, she said she received word that Kuhn wanted to see her. She told Kuhn about the ship incident, and he said he "would take care of that." She said Kuhn refused to believe her accounts of Vandenbergh's advances and letters.

"He told me to be very quiet, that he could not be responsible for what happened to members," she said.

At one point Miss Vooros was excused from the stand and Chairman Dies called John C. Metcalfe, former committee investigator, who joined the bund to report on its activities. Metcalfe exhibited a series of charts, demonstrating, he said, bund methods of distributing Nazi propaganda and connections with other American groups with similar aims.

Other testimony by Miss Vooros, summarized:

That Dr. I. T. Griebl, who fled the country during last year's investigation of German espionage, was one of three "undercover men" for the bund. The other two, she said, were Frederick Schiller, of Manhattan, who, she charged, handled anti-Masonic literature from Germany, and a man named Deppe.

That while the Federal Bureau of Investigation was seeking Heinz Spanknoebel, former Nazi leader, who also fled the country during the German spy investigation, Spanknoebel was hidden in the Brooklyn home of Severin Wintersheidt, editor of the bund news organ, now in prison on immorality charges.

That Friz Kuhn made a "false" statement to the committee when he said the bund encouraged members in American tenets, and that, instead, the American Government and American history were constantly criticized, that bund members were fined for not speaking German at meetings, and were trained in propaganda work.

Squalus May Rise Without Pontoons

Portsmouth, N. H., Aug. 18 (AP).—A possibility the submarine Squalus might be raised without pontoons and towed to the Portsmouth Navy Yard, whence she sailed on her fateful voyage May 23, was advanced tonight by Rear Admiral Cyrus W. Cole, directing the salvage of the stricken submersible.

After an inspection by divers of the Squalus' new resting place, 92 feet below the surface, and a conference with salvage officers, Admiral Cole declared he might order the hull blown clear of water by closing two main engine induction valves and two hull ventilation valves.

Powell to Head Employment Security Bureau

Directing personnel of the new bureau of employment security of the Social Security Board was announced yesterday. The bureau will be headed by Oscar M. Powell, assisted by R. Gordon Wagnet, assistant director in charge of unemployment compensation.

Other administrative officials of the new bureau will include William H. Stead, assistant director in charge of employment service; Collis Stocking, chief of the division of research and statistics, and Cornelius R. P. Cochrane, chief of the field division. In addition, Byron Mitchell has been loaned to the bureau from the Texas Employment Service as a consultant.

The bureau is composed of four divisions—employment service, unemployment compensation, research and statistics, and a new field division which will serve as clearing center for the Federal agency and to co-operate with State unemployment compensation and employment agencies.

Crops Ruined in Alabama Flood

Selma, Ala., Aug. 18 (AP).—Alabama counted millions in crop and property losses and listed some 4,500 homeless tonight while storm-bred flood crests shifted down into the basins of the Alabama and Cahaba Rivers.

A fleet of boats shuttled through the distressed areas on rescue and relief missions. Four launches worked from an oil tanker towed to the confluence of the Alabama and Cahaba with food supplies for 600.

So acute were crop losses throughout South Alabama that the State agricultural extension service called an emergency conference at Montgomery for Tuesday. P. O. Davis, director, said the prospective cotton harvest had been reduced one-half and corn crops lost completely in south counties.

Inquiry to Sift Small Policy Insurance Cost

Investigation to Open Next Wednesday to Suggest Reduction

By International News Service

The temporary national economic committee squared away yesterday for a public inquiry into industrial insurance, the most widely distributed type of policy written in the United States.

A four-man sub-committee, headed by Federal Trade Commissioner Garland Ferguson, will start delving next Wednesday into a mass of evidence the Securities Commission has spent months assembling on the social and economic value of this so-called "poor man's policies."

Sub-committee members are Ewin L. Davis, also a Federal Trade commissioner; Joseph J. O'Connell, Treasury economist, and Representative Casey (Democrat), of Massachusetts.

Cost More, Paid Less

An official of the SEC said the bales of statistics the agency had digested indicated industrial policies cost the insured more and returned the beneficiary less than any other life insurance extant.

The insurance companies, he explained, had reasonable and convincing explanations of the cost, and acknowledged the desirability of reducing it, but confessed themselves stumped on how it should be done.

The latest enumeration, taken December 31, 1937, revealed 88,881,302 industrial policies in effect. On these, the SEC studies showed, policyholders were paying premiums totaling nearly $750,000,000 a year.

The SEC analysis of policies terminated, however, revealed only 4½ per cent canceled by the death of the insured and payment of the principal to the beneficiary.

Twenty per cent were terminiated by surrender for a cash payment amounting to "substantially less" than the total of premiums paid in. Seventy per cent lapsed by reason of failure to keep up premiums.

Unemployment Factor

Unemployment played the principle havoc in the high cancellation rate, the SEC studies show. Industrial policies found their readiest acceptance in metropolitan factory areas, where depressions strike first and hardest.

The principal factor in the high premium rate, the analysis revealed, was the commissions paid to agents for weekly collections.

In an effort to reduce the premiums and further popularize the policies, an official said, several larger companies offered 10 per cent discounts on premiums mailed or delivered by the insured to the agent's office.

The innovation brought no marked response, he said, the policyholders discovering that the postage or car fare frequently consumed the savings represented by the discount.

In defense of industrial policies, the SEC understood, the underwriters are prepared to prove the policies inculcate a savings habit among families otherwise habituated to live "from hand to mouth" and present to wage earners in the lower income brackets their only opportunity to acquire a small estate to bequeath to dependent heirs.

On completion of the insurance inquiry, officials said, the TNEC will delve into investment banking.

Top-flight Wall Street figures will be summoned, officials said, the witness list including George Whitney, of J. P. Morgan & Co.; Elisha Walker, Kuhn Loeb & Co., and Charles E. Mitchell, one-time head of the National City Bank, now chairman of Blyth & Co.

Political Arena

Lake City, Minn., Aug. 18 (AP).—Representative Andresen (Republican), of Minnesota, in a statement today called President Roosevelt a "war agitator" and said he is "seeking war so as to make the people forget the failures of his Administration and the critical conditions prevailing in this country."

ANDRESEN

"Through war," Andresen's statement added, "He hopes to create a fictitious prosperity and make himself a world leader."

Forces attempting to line up the "cattle country" in the Rocky Mountain States for a third term for President Roosevelt are having rough going, according to reports received here yesterday in Congressional circles.

Action of Secretary of the Interior Ickes in withdrawing 4,000 square miles of public domain in Nevada from private purposes, chiefly livestock grazing, was said to have caused keen resentment.

In prominent Democratic circles there were predictions that Nevada, Montana, Wyoming, Colorado and perhaps other States in the cattle and mining country would send uninstructed delegations to the 1940 Democratic National Convention.

Niagara Falls, N. Y., Aug. 18 (AP).—Senator Pat McCarran (Democrat), Nevada, predicted in an interview today "the matter of a third term will not present itself to the American people."

"The idea of limitation to two terms for a Chief Executive has become so crystallized in American custom and tradition as to become more sacred than written law," he added. "That is as well known to the present Executive as to the most humble member of Congress."

Bribe to Call Bridges a Red Is Alleged

Offers Up to $5,000 Charged to Oregon Police Detective

By the Associated Press

San Francisco, Aug. 18.—Testimony that Detective William Brown of the Portland (Oreg.) police department offered money for information linking Harry Bridges with the Communist Party, was given at the deportation hearing of the maritime C. I. O. labor leader today.

Miss Craney Goldman, a comely stenographer from Los Angeles, testified she took a 26-page question and answer statement from John L. Leech, former Communist, at Los Angeles in July, 1937, in which Leech made the accusation of bribery attempt.

Leech previously testified he was a Communist Party organizer who later resigned from the party, and that Bridges attended meetings of Communists.

C. of C. Offer Charged

Miss Goldman said Leech's statement named Detective Brown as having shown Leech a billfold containing money, on top of which was a $100 bill.

"You name the price, we are willing to go the limit," Brown was quoted.

Leech's statement said the offer was for information linking Bridges with the Communist Party.

About a week later, a second man visited him. The statement identified him as secretary of the Oregon Joint Chamber of Commerce, or the Oregon Associated Chamber of Commerce, whose name started with an "S." Miss Goldman asserted.

Leech said the man showed him two checks, Miss Goldman testified, one made out to cash for $2,000, which he said only required Leech's signature, and the second check blank, except for the man's signature.

Says $5,000 Was Offered

"Then he insisted I name the amount," Leech's statement continued and "would $5,000 help change my mind?"

"I told him," the statement added, "that as far as I was concerned it was not a question of money. There was only the question of my personal honor, plus the fact that I had no information that would do the Government any good."

Attached to the statement was an affidavit from A. C. Bundy stating that Leech had invited him to hide in the Leech home on the second of three visits reputedly made by Detective Brown, at which time Brown allegedly offered $1,000 for information on Bridges.

Omaha Officials Turn Princes for Orphan Cinderella

Omaha, Nebr., Aug. 18 (AP).—Helen Berida, 12-year-old Detroit orphan, is reliving the story of Cinderella.

Helen was taken from an orphanage at Detroit and placed on a Hollywood-bound train—there to meet the stars in person and live the life that little orphan girls dream about.

She had laughed, cried, then fainted when told she was going to Filmland with a selected group of other orphans from various cities.

When the train reached Omaha, it looked like the clock had struck 12 and the party was over. Helen was taken to a hospital for an emergency appendectomy.

Today the second half of the story is being lived by Helen. She had not one dream prince, but a dozen or more city officials, movie stars and others striving to claim the honor.

And the party? Helen is going to Hollywood—just she and her chaperon—for a private party as soon as she is strong enough.

Scores of Cities Compete to Try Food Stamp Plan

Federal farm officials, setting up Nation-wide machinery to expand the food stamp plan, expressed concern yesterday that funds may not be sufficient to meet applications from scores of cities eager to try the relief scheme.

Secretary Wallace estimated he had "between $50,000,000 and $60,000,000" to use on the experiment this year.

Under the original plan, which started at Rochester, N. Y., persons on relief could exchange $1 pay for food stamps worth $1.50. They received four 25-cent orange-colored stamps which could be exchanged for any foods, and two 25-cent blue stamps to be used in buying foods designated as surplus by the secretary.

Previously, the Federal Government purchased these surplus foods directly and distributed them through State relief agencies. Under the stamp plan, the relief family does its shopping at the corner grocery store.

The grocers have been able to cash these stamps at local banks, which are repaid by the Treasury and Secretary of Agriculture.

Grocers, who formerly protested the free distribution of competitive food products, have been enthusistic supporters of the stamp plan because it gives them additional sales.

Foods on the surplus lists that may be purchased with the blue stamps include butter, shell eggs, corn meal, dried prunes, dry beans, wheat and whole wheat flour, oranges and grapefruit, rice, cabbage, fresh peaches, fresh green peas, fresh tomatoes, onions, lard and vegetable shortening.

Army Pharmacy School Will Be Established Here

An Army school of pharmacy will be established here next month, the War Department announced yesterday.

Selected enlisted men from all over the United States will be ordered to the Army Medical Center for a nine-month course, beginning September 15, it was said. A faculty of Army doctors and registered pharmacists who hold commissions in the Regular Army Medical Administrative Corps is now being selected.

Col. George Dunham will be in direct charge of the school, under Brig. Gen. Wallace DeWitt, commandant at Walter Reed, officials said.

Applicants for the course must have at least a high school education or its equivalent, the department said.

Judge Frees Man Indicted In Louisiana

Federal Jurist Says Grand Jury Evidence Is Unsatisfactory

By the Associated Press

Dallas, Tex., Aug. 18.—A Federal judge released on a writ of habeas corpus today Freeman W. Burford, wealthy oilman of Dallas, indicted in Louisiana on charges of conspiracy to violate the Connally "hot oil" act, then caustically criticized conditions in that State.

Federal Judge T. W. Davidson said graft would not be suppressed in Louisiana "so long as rubber stamp men hold the seal of State and put an O. K. on the crooks that happen to be over and above them."

Burford had been indicted with former Gov. Richard W. Leche and Seymour Weiss, who, Judge Davidson declared in his opinion, used their official status "to cash in." Weiss is a dominant figure in Louisiana politics.

Rogge Plans Appeal

Assistant Attorney General O. John Rogge, in charge of the Government's investigation in Louisiana, declared Burford would be "picked up" in some other Federal district. He said the ruling, which also denied a removal order, held only in the Northern District of Texas. An appeal was under consideration.

Rogge asserted Judge Davidson's opinion would have no effect upon the indictments in Louisiana.

Judge Davidson held that payment of $100,000 by Burford to Weiss in connection with sale of his Louisiana-Texas pipeline for $950,000 was a legitimate business commission. He further held there was no evidence to show Burford knew "he was a part of and contributing to an unlawful conspiracy by which the Governor-elect of Louisiana and Seymour Weiss, the political boss, expected to put some money in their pockets."

Judge's Ruling

Findings of the Louisiana grand jury, Davidson ruled, were impaired "by their own conduct and by the witnesses that have been produced in this court." He added:

"I fear that the time will not soon arrive when graft will be suppressed in Louisiana so long as rubber-stamp men hold the seal of the State and put an O.K. on the crooks that happen to be over and above them.

"For the reasons given, I don't feel that the indictment itself is entitled to the weight that an indictment is ordinarily entitled to in a court of justice when it is offered for the purpose of evidence."

Use Judgment In Tooting Horns Auto Club Urges

Commissioner Hazen's antinoise crusade yesterday drew support from the Keystone Automobile Club.

George Keneipp, manager of the club, urged all motorists to use their horns "sensibly, temperately and considerately."

"It cannot be denied," said Keneipp, "that some motorists are most inconsiderate in their use of the horn, especially late at night, and for such action there is no defense. There is an important and legitimate use for the warning device on the motor car, but motorists should use good judgment in employing it."

Virginia 'War' Held Benefit to All Involved

Troops Bettered, Farmers and Towns In Area Count Profits

Benefit for all concerned, rather than desolation, followed in the wake of the war waged in northern Virginia this week, Army strategists and inhabitants of the area agreed yesterday.

Looking back on the "battle," the high command and Virginia natives were unanimous in holding that the peacetime variety of the deadliest of the Four Horsemen produced profit for all.

The Army gained a better trained staff and improved fighting men.

The troops themselves—guardsmen and regulars—had a good time and returned with hardened muscles and improved health.

Merchants of Manassas and neighboring towns have had the heaviest business period in history.

Farmers of Prince William County have money in their pockets and improvements to their lands—rentals and cashable claims against the Government for broken fences and trampled pastures, as well as water towers, power lines and wells constructed for the troops and left for the landowners.

No Serious Accidents

The two weeks of maneuvers produced no fatalities or serious accidents. Hundreds of trucks and tanks racing over narrow, bumpy backroads had several collisions, but only a handful of men was sent to hospitals and none was dangerously hurt.

There were no epidemics and the sick list was mainly confined to men with poison ivy, acute appendicitis and chiggers.

Surprisingly, there were few heat prostrations, considering that nearly 20,000 men bearing rifles and full packs were operating in the blazing sun, during a week when the summer's highest temperatures closed Washington offices.

The military lessons of the campaign must await study of the general staff, but Army officials yesterday regarded results as amply justifying the maneuvers.

Guards Come Home Today

Practically all of the Regular troops were back at their home stations last night, as the 23,000-man armies rapidly demobilized. There are not enough trucks to go around, so most of the Guardsmen remained in camp while the Regulars rode home.

The vanguard of the District Guard returned to its armory late in the afternoon—a convoy of trucks loaded with equipment. The remainder of the 1,200 local soldiers will be brought home today.

Eight horses died on the march home. Exhausted under the strain of maneuvers, six Artillery draft horses and one Calvary mount collapsed on the way to Fort Myer. At least two others are in bad shape, officers of the post declared, and may not survive.

A girl and three soldiers were slightly hurt and a horse was killed when an automobile crashed into an Artillery caisson on Columbia pike, near Randolph street. Both vehicles went into the ditch when the car struck the caisson, which carried no lights. Betty Watson, 16, was bruised, and Privates Stephan Szabo, John J. Sinkovich and Charles Covach were cut in the accident.

150 Delegates, Guests Attend Stamp Session

Special Dispatch to The Post

Baltimore, Aug. 18.—More than 150 guests and delegates attended the opening of the seventeenth annual convention of the Precancel Stamp Society, Inc., in the Lord Baltimore Hotel yesterday. An exhibition of 200 frames of precanceled stamps was held prior to the opening address by Henry O. Nouss, convention president, of St. Louis, Mo.

A total of 700 lots of stamps were disposed of at the annual donation auction held last night. Other highlights of the opening day were displays of frames from the Division of Stamps, a model subpostoffice station and a philatelic agency.

Delegates to the convention from the District were J. L. Taylor, Charles A. Kenny, Carl C. Cook, Rolston Lyons, George W. Hawse, Ralph Smith and W. M. Stuart.

J. E. Wade, of Baltimore, reported for the election committee that nominated officers include H. P. Hoskins, of Chicago, president; Wilson P. Smith, of Baltimore, vice president, and A. F. Gamber, of Florida, secretary. The Precancel Bee, edited by S. G. Rich, of Verona, N. J., was selected as the official organ of the group.

Fugitives Escape In 'Smoke Screen' Of Pants and Shirts

A "smoke screen" of men's and women's clothing was used by three young men early yesterday to escape Third Precinct police in a 60-mile-an-hour chase.

Tossing pants, shirts and stockings at the windshield of the speeding scout car, the fugitives managed to delay their pursuers enough to beat them across the Memorial Bridge and speed away through the Arlington Experimental Farm.

Policemen Maurice C. Barco and Henry J. Martin were suspicious of the men who were parked in the 2000 block of F street northwest. When Martin walked in front of the car to get the tag number, one of the men started the car, which knocked the policeman down and sped away. Martin was uninjured, and he and Barco took up the chase. Examination of the garments led police to believe they had been stolen. A lookout was broadcast for the suspects.

Hitler Charming, Witty, Gracious Says American Girl Dancer

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

MIRIAM VERNE

Der Fuehrer Offered to Make Her the Toast of Germany

Fuehrer Offered German Film Contract, "With No Strings Attached," She Reveals, Promising Stardom Like Garbo

By Dan Campbell

United Press Staff Writer.

London, Aug. 18.—There is nothing warlike about Adolf Hitler when he thinks a girl is wonderful, and 19-year-old Miriam Verne, of Pittsburgh, ought to know what she is talking about.

Miriam, who thinks the Fuehrer is "perfectly charming" after dancing before him several times, said tonight that the Hitler she is reading about in frightening newspaper headlines isn't the Hitler she knows.

With an ascetic rolling of her blue eyes, she summed up a romantic description of the Fuehrer with a sigh:

"Ah, Mr. Hitler!"

Approach Is Fetching

Just arrived from Italy with an indignant denial of reports that she had "stood up" Hitler by not appearing at a Munich performance for which she had been billed, Miriam told how fetching is the Fuehrer's approach to women.

He personally offered to make her a star, the toast of Germany with a following as great as those of Joan Crawford or Greta Garbo in the United States, she said.

Right now, she added, there is a contract waiting for her in Germany but she doesn't know what all of its clauses say and she hasn't signed it yet.

No Strings Tied to Offer

"But," she added quickly, "there are no strings tied to the offer such as there have been to some contracts offered me in America."

"Hitler likes everything American. He likes American rhythm, and he makes you feel like an old friend."

Miriam giggled and said:

"I guess he must have read 'How to Win Friends and Influence People' because he puts you completely at ease. When he speaks you feel that he is speaking only to you."

Miriam, who was the second American girl to delight Hitler with her dancing, explained her dance steps that brought from Hitler the comment that she had "marvelous movements of the body and legs."

"I guess he meant flexes," she said.

He Likes Tap Dancing

Her routines include an acrobatic ballet and some tap-dancing, the latter being Hitler's favorite. Her acrobatic steps are danced to the song "Lover," and Hitler's favorite tapping to "Ain't misbehaving."

Miriam said she "really wants to go back home to the United States," but that she had no guarantee of a job and realizes that the fact that she thinks Hitler is "grand" had given her adverse publicity in America.

"I can be a star in Germany, but I don't want that," she said.

She learned German in 10 months well enough to be able to converse with Hitler, who is "a great ad-libber and always ready with a quick and witty retort."

Lauds His Stage Sense

He could have been a great stage-manager, she said, because he personally criticized her show and suggested a rearrangement of the acts.

She had tea several times with the Fuehrer. Their conversations "weren't always general," but she refused to elaborate on that, saying she didn't want to discuss political questions.

"His eyes, which are so big, seem to mesmerize one," said the shapely blonde, who once danced at the Paradise Cafe in New York.

Miriam was asked to repeat just one of the most intimate things that Hitler ever said to her.

"That is putting me on the spot," she parried.

Mrs. McCuen Not Sure She's Legally Mayor

Glen Echo Executive Lays Any Mistake To 'Just Stupidity'

Mrs. Beulah H. McCuen, newly appointed Mayor of Glen Echo, confronted yesterday with a grim legal clause from section 457 of article 16, Code of Public Local laws, which threatened to end her administration before it begins, had few words to say.

In the first place, the clause says: ". . . in the event of the death or resignation of the mayor, the council shall elect one of their number to fill the vacancy until the expiration of the former mayor's term . . ."

"I want it understood that I am not indignant," Mrs. McCuen said. "The first I knew of my appointment was when my husband (Henry T. McCuen, who resigned as mayor because of the Hatch law) came home and informed me that I had been appointed to fill his place. Then Councilman Mrs. Fannie Orndorff came by to congratulate me, as did Town Clerk and Treasurer Frank W. Sweitzer.

Named to Council First

"Now, I have no comment to make. But I do not want to be placed in embarrassment. The council appointed me, and if they don't know what they're doing it's just stupidity, and I am sure the people would stand behind me in such a position."

Concerning the clause in the law, Mrs. McCuen last night pointed out that the council first appointed her to the council and then—in a next move—appointed her mayor. Thus, it was argued, the law was entirely complied with.

Mrs. McCuen pointed out that her husband, the former mayor, had served Glen Echo well for 16 years and she considered the appointment coming to her as a great courtesy.

Mr. McCuen, superintendent of the Friendship branch of the Postoffice here, who resigned Monday night as Mayor, said he had nothing to say about the Glen Echo dilemma.

Councilman Donald Canada said last night that the law had been brought to his attention and "we don't know what to do." He didn't know that anything would be done, and he said that the second question which has been raised—whether there was a quorum when Mrs. McCuen was appointed—might be referred to Town Clerk and Treasurer Sweitzer.

Neither the clerk nor the treasurer was reached last night, nor were Councilmen Orndorff, Charles W. Ballenger or Clifford Peters. Peters is out on a month's vacation. Ballenger is a new member who came in Monday when Leslie Engel, a Navy Yard employe, also quit because of the Hatch law.

Stroud Twin Sued By Blond Actress Seeking $50,000

Los Angeles, Aug. 18 (AP).—Clarence Grigsby Stroud, one of the Stroud twins of radio and screen, was sued for $50,000 today by Meredith B. Davis, blond actress who charged breach of promise and seduction.

Miss David claimed Stroud proposed marriage in Philadelphia in December, 1938, and that they lived as man and wife in New York, Miami, Toronto, Atlanta and Los Angeles until last March, when she informed him she was expecting a child.

Stroud then abandoned her, she charged, promising to provide for her but subsequently leaving her destitute.

'Kiss Bride as Long as She Lets You,' Harrison Told at Wedding

'Obey' Omitted in Ceremony After Conductor Has Some Bad Moments When His Choice, Mary Becker, Fails to Show Up on Time

Pretty Mary Cecile Becker was late for her wedding yesterday to Guy Fraser Harrison, 44-year-old conductor of the Rochester Civic Orchestra, in the offices of Municipal Court Judge Robbert E. Mattingly.

A score of friends and music patrons attended the ceremony which made the Minneapolis girl the third bride of the musician, who is guest conductor this week at the Watergate concerts.

Miss Becker, who is a graduate student at New York University, was dressed in a pink wool suit and wore a shoulder bouquet of gardenias and lilies of the valley. Harrison wore a white linen suit and used a purple aster for a boutonniere.

Judge Mattingly read the ceremony from a battered little book that probably sees more service than any other similar volume in Washington. He omitted the word "obey," and at the end of his reading continued in the same voice with the words: "And now kiss the bride as long as she will let you."

Millard Taylor, concert master for the National Symphony Orchestra, was best man, and Mrs. William Dow Boutwell, of Georgetown, was matron of honor.

A small reception was given by the conductor at his suite at the Raleigh Hotel following the marriage. After the Sunday night concert at the Watergate, where he will conduct again, Harrison and his bride will go to Rochester and then to northern Michigan for a honeymoon.

Posse Combs Hills In Quest of Youth, Suspect in Killing

A Marshall County (Va.) youth was arrested last night in connection with a shooting in which 17-year-old Everett Carter, of Ada, was killed and his cousin, Richard Carter, 21, was wounded critically.

Sheriff W. S. Woolf, of Warrenton, and a posse captured the 18-year-old suspect after combing the hill country between Ada and Marshall. The suspect's name was furnished by the wounded man. The two Carters were shot while walking along a highway between Ada and Marshall on Thursday night. Everett died in Fauquier County Hospital at Warrenton a few hours after the shooting.

Richard, shot through the abdomen, could suggest no motive for the attack. Authorities, however, described it as a "shooting brawl."

2 Paralysis Cases In D. C. Called No Cause for Alarm

Acting Health Officer Daniel L. Seckinger yesterday urged Washingtonians not to be alarmed by the two cases of infantile paralysis in the city.

He said there was no evidence that a serious outbreak would occur in this locality. Two girls stricken with the disease are being treated in a local hospital. One is 11 years old and the other 7; one a resident of the District and the other of nearby Virginia.

Last year at this time there were nine cases and one death in the District. The cases reported yesterday by the Health Department were the first this season. Dr. James G. Cumming, chief of the communicable disease service, is conducting an epidemiological investigation.

Trunk Slaying Inquiry Shifts To Atlanta

D. C. Police Await Word From 2 Men Sent to Georgia City

After exhausting one clew in the bizarre trunk murder of a young mulatto woman, Washington police last night awaited word from investigators sent to Atlanta, where the body was discovered Thursday by railway baggage clerks.

Detectives spent several hours yesterday attempting to trace the whereabouts of a man known to have been in company with a missing woman whose description fitted the victim. A baggage check on the murder trunk when it was shipped from Union Station Tuesday, bore the name "Joe Smith."

Detective Sergt. Aubrey Tolson and Dr. Richard Rosenberg, deputy coroner, last night notified District police from Atlanta that they were bringing the body back to Washington in an effort to identify the woman. Photographs were "unrecognizable," they said, and furnished no clue to her identity.

Police here said they have been hampered in checking missing person files by failure of Atlanta authorities to furnish complete details on physical characteristics of the woman.

The small trunk with its grewsome contents was shipped from here at 9:45 p. m. Tuesday and arrived in Atlanta about 3 p. m. Wednesday. Terminal workers discovered the body Thursday. A railroad ticket, purchased when the trunk was shipped, was not used.

White House Seal Fenced From Tourists

Tourists no longer can go home and tell the folks they walked on the President's seal in the main hall at the White House.

A little "fence" of brass posts with red cord strung through them has been installed to protect the seal—a circular plaque of yellow bronze inlaid in the floor.

The seal, placed when the White House was remodeled in Theodore Roosevelt's Administration, heretofore has been open to all feet.

2 Cameramen Kept From Taking Pictures At Martin Factory

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, Aug. 18.—Secrecy surrounding construction of Army and Navy planes at the Glenn L. Martin plant here resulted today in the manhandling by company guards of two newspaper photographers attempting to photograph—with official permission—the test hop of a bomber built for the French government.

Just as the high-speed ship was about to take off, guards seized Jack Shipley and John Stadler, the cameramen, roughed them up, kicked Shipley's camera, and held both men until the plane, piloted by W. K. Ebel, chief Martin test pilot, was in the air.

Neither Wearing Badge

A few minutes before, Marsh K Powers, assistant to President Glenn L. Martin, had given oral orders to a guard approving the protographs.

Cheif J. A. Wertman, of the plant police, said Shipley and Stadler were stopped because neither was wearing official visitor's badges.

Plant officials apologized, asserting the guards had acted under strict rules governing photographs of Martin ships, laid down by the Army and Navy. The plant has millions of dollars worth of plane orders from the Federal Government.

300 M. P. H. Speed

The ship, fastest ever built at the Baltimore plant, is capable of speed exceeding 300 miles an hour. It carries a crew of three, is powered by two engines, weights about 8½ tons, and has a wing spread of 61 feet.

It is the first turned out under a $28,000,000 order placed with Martin by the French government six months ago and will be delivered in about a week.

Engine on Exhibit

New York, Aug. 18 (AP).—An aeronautical engineer unceremoniously yanked a tarpaulin off an exhibit in the aviation building at the New York World's Fair today to uncover the most powerful high altitude aircraft engine ever built.

Tested by the Army and Navy, it will make possible speeds above 400 miles an hour for bombing planes for the first time since the feverish quest for higher speeds began incident to world-wide rearmament.

The engine, with a rating of 1,800 horsepower above altitudes of 20,000 feet, is highly supercharged. Streamlined in accordance with specifications of the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics, it is bullet-like, compact and narrow to reduce wind resistance.

Military men attach high tactical value to high-speed bombers. In war time they could not only elude defending pursuit planes but also would make difficult targets for anti-aircraft fire. Unofficially, it was said that no world power had yet produced a bomber which would approach within 75 miles an hour the speed made possible by the new engine.

Soviet Puts on Show

Moscow, Aug. 18 (AP).—Three girls from a Russian factory put on a special stunting act at the annual air show today for the British and French military missions, here for general staff talks, and foreign diplomats.

The girls are "spare-time pilots" and did their act with three planes in formation. Their breath-taking loops and rolls awed the thousands who watched the show at Tushino Airport.

Jumping in teams of 20 by parachutists, formation flights by fast four-engine bombers and combat plane maneuvers were part of the program. The bombers destroyed a "munitions factory" while anti-aircraft guns vainly barked defiance.

Dogs Irritable, Too, on Hot Day... Owners Warned

Health Department officials yesterday asked owners of dogs to be kind to their pets during these hot days.

"Dogs, like people, are inclined to be more irritable during the hot weather," said Dr. Melvin Price Isaminger, director of public health instruction.

Meanwhile, Poundmaster Frank B. Marks said he would today begin a round-up of dogs which, as yet, are unlicensed. The deadline for the tags was August 1. The number of tagless dogs is estimated at from 10,000 to 25,000.

Bette Davis Triumphs as 'Old Maid,' at Earle; 'Going Native,' 'Glamour Girls' Capitol Hits

Miriam Hopkins Shares Stellar Honors in Drama of Bitterness; Varied Stage Bill

"THE OLD MAID." Warner Brothers picturization of the novel by Edith Wharton and stage play by Zoe Akins, adapted to the screen by Casey Robinson, co-starring Bette Davis and Miriam Hopkins, with George Brent, Donald Crisp, Jane Bryan, Louise Fazenda, James Stephenson, Jerome Cowan, William Lundigan, Rand Brooks, Cecilia Loftus and Janet Shaw. Directed by Edmund Goulding. Previewed Wednesday, August 16. At the Earle Theater.

Devoid of the extravagances of violent physical climaxes—there are some of great emotional intensity—somber, suppressed and more bitter than sweet, "The Old Maid" still is a distinguished picture that exerts a tremendous grip upon both an audience's heart and mind.

BELL

It is played, for the most part, in an inhibited and restricted mood, but so well played by so admirable a cast that its very fidelity to the spirit of the book and play upon which it is based becomes one of its major elements of strength.

The story is pitched back into the period of the War Between the States and concerns itself with a household in which two charming young women are in love with the same dashing young man, inclined a bit, at first, to the side of profligacy. He has been betrothed to Delia Lovell, but returns to his native town just a little too late. He arrives on the day that she is to marry Jim Ralston, and shortly afterward loses his life in the war.

The bitterness that characterizes much of the play's development is engendered by Charlotte Lovell when she confides to her cousin that she is so devoted to the home she has founded for war orphans because one of them is her own daughter and Clem Spender the child's father. Strict conventions and rigidly observed social usages tip the scales slightly in favor of the jealous Mrs. Ralston, who, with two children of her own, still resents Charlotte's surreptitious place in Clem's life.

Mother Poses as Aunt

When circumstances compel Charlotte and her unnamed daughter to share Delia's home, the mother finds herself in the heart-breaking position of having to pose as her own daughter's straight-laced and vindictive "old maid aunt," while Delia is accepted by the child as her real mother. It is upon this premise that the venomous and unending struggle of two headstrong and untrusting women is based. It is a feud that feeds upon those subtle qualities of feminine nature that can be productive of so much that is evil along with a great deal that is good.

The progress of the narrative rests primarily upon the characters of Charlotte and Delia, impersonated with consummate skill by Bette Davis and Miriam Hopkins, but these characters would lose half of their strength were it not for the perfection with which they are complemented by Jane Bryan in the role of the daughter who never learns or even suspects the secret of her parentage.

The mean duplicities, deliberate falsehoods and deeply repressed distrust and hatred that exist between Charlotte and Delia are expressed in terms that are psychological and emotionally repressed. The power of the play is wholly dependent upon the deftness with which it is acted and the skill with which it is directed. "The Old Maid" offers a superlative example of profoundly moving realism in both departments.

Three Roles Supreme

Bette Davis, in the title role, is called upon to create an early mood of resentment and resignation and sustain that difficult pose throughout the succeeding periods of the action. Miriam Hopkins, as Delia, the more favored of the warring women, is cast in a gayer, if not a pleasanter part. Miss Davis' is the more difficult task and she performs it with fine artistry and integrity. Miss Hopkins is no less adroit in her less exacting role. The co-stars of the picture find a perfect foil for their characterizations in the splendid interpretation Jane Bryan brings to the role of the daughter, whose ignorance of the conditions surrounding her life adds to the anguish of her real mother in the precise proportion that they satisfy the hidden longing of her adopted "mommy." These three figures so completely dominate the play that nothing else especially matters.

The virtues of the film do not end there, however. Donald Crisp, as the family physician; Louise Fazenda, as a faithful maid, and Jerome Cowan as Charlotte's cheated bridegroom, contribute notably to the effectiveness of the major movements of the play. William Lundigan, as Tina's youthful lover; James Stephenson, George Brent, in the brief role of Clem, and Cecilia Loftus, as a crotchety grandmother, whose acid manner is only the disguise of a warm and generous heart, are others who add to the luster of an exceptionally well-balanced and competent acting ensemble. Their direction by Edmund Goulding and the production the play has been given are impeccable.

Familiar Acts on Stage

The "Magazine Memories" revue on the Earle stage this week is diversified and diverting. The sensational Stuart Morgan adagio dancers occupy the featured position on the bill in their familiar interval of apparently attempting to end the life of an intrepid young woman and are surrounded by Kay Hamilton, a lusty singer of songs; the Lime Trio, in their contortionistic interlude, and Bob Hall, that extemporaneous fellow, who will make up a song on suggested topics, the spur of the moment or the lid of his trunk, without urging.

The Roxyettes appear in numerous routines, the most noteworthy being their feather fan number and the "Adventures of Robin Hood" conceit.

The new Paramount News, taking comic cognizance of President Roosevelt's Thanksgiving proclamation and Jo Lombardi's overture augment a bill that needs only "The Old Maid" to insure its distinction.

Miss Davis' performance already is causing talk of another Academy Award for the best feminine acting of the current year. Miriam Hopkins is costarred, with a strong cast in the supporting roles

Local Talent Revue Is of Professional Content and Caliber; Picture Aids Bill

"THESE GLAMOUR GIRLS." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of a story by Jane Hall, adapted to the screen by the author and Marion Parsonnet, featuring Lew Ayres and Lana Turner, with Tom Brown, Richard Carlson, Jane Bryan, Anita Louise, Marsha Hunt, Ann Rutherford, Mary Beth Hughes, Owen Davis, jr., Ernest Truex and others. Directed by S. Sylvan Simon. Previewed Tuesday, August 15. At Loew's Capitol Theater.

If Maj. Bowes would like to learn how it's done, he should come down to Loew's Capitol Theater this week and take a look at "Going Native."

This seventh annual edition of the all-Washington stage production has been effectively routined and staged by Gene Ford and betrays fewer signs of amateurism than any of its predecessors. It boasts a talented list of principals, under the suave and genial guidance of Paul Gerritts, the roller-skating m. c. and raconteur, an attractive and versatile group of 16 "line girls" and moves smoothly and rapidly. It is, in short, a revue that could go into any man's theater and do credit to itself and to the house.

An offstage vocal and the chorus in a spirited tap number serve to get the proceedings under way and introduce the pungent Mr. Gerritts for a cleverly executed "Settle Down" ensemble. Banks Murray, jr., crashes the stage to act as Mr. Gerritts' understudy with ambitions to be a full-fledged master of ceremonies, and brings with him Dorothy Walsh, one of the most nimble of the tap dancers and a youthful comedienne of conspicuous ability. These two bob in and out throughout the goings-on.

Some Smash Hits

Tom, Dick and Harry, an harmonica trio of the first rank—they even tackle Raymond Scott's "Powerhouse"—score one of the smash hits of the show in the next spot and are followed by Marjorie King, whose splendid soprano was its best in yesterday's first performance in a well-chosen group of standard songs, the last of which introduced a striking blue and white ballet number by the girls with a skillfully executed solo toe dance by Evelyn Foster as its highlight. Miss Foster, you will recall, is the "Miss Washington of 1939," who will compete in the Atlantic City beauty pageant next month. The ovation she received yesterday augurs well for a high rating in the finals.

Robert Youmans, recruited from the Capitol floor staff, proved himself a real virtuoso at the xylophone and also came in for one of the audience's most enthusiastic receptions. So did Fague Springman, barytone, whose voice has been heard in the Capitol before, but not from the stage.

Rousing Ensembles

A rousing ensemble is contributed to "Going Native" by Guthridge and Gargan and the German Band in "Dead End." The German Band is composed of Catholic University boys and oom-pahs with the best of them. Guthridge and Gargan are two unusual dancers, even going so far as to tap out one of their numbers on the heads of two small kegs—probably having something to do with a certain popular polka. Another colorful ensemble is offered by Sylvia Kaplowitz and Her Accordion Septet, punctuated by brilliant soprano interpolations by Bernadette Crouch. This was another of the smash hits at the initial performance.

In the meantime, the Messrs. Gerritts, Murray et al., have been having fun with one Evans, in a straitjacket, and Joe Johnson, the Herculean page boy from the Willard Hotel. Paul Gerritts is the only one to jeopardize "Going Native's" amateur standing. He does his own inimitable act on skates and, as always, is a tremendous hit.

The finale has been nicely contrived and the whole merry business was so expertly spun off at its opening that nothing but congratulations can be extended to everyone concerned.

"These Glamour Girls," on the screen—which necessarily takes second place in local interest this week—is a judicious selection to complement "Going Native." It also is full of youth, life, music and fun.

A College-Boy "Joke"

The story concerns the results of a college boy's joke in introducing a taxi-dancer among the top-drawer debutantes at the Kingsford College week-end parties. There is only one taxi-dancer, but there are all kinds of debs—most of them insufferable snobs, but one or two blessed with a few of the kindlier impulses.

An especially adroit cast has been selected for the interpretation of this minor musical melange, including Lew Ayres and Lana Turner, as the jokester and his victim; Anita Louise, as the "snootiest" of the debbies; Jane Bryan, as the kindest and most understanding; Marsha Hunt, the passe young "college widow," thwarted by time; Ann Rutherford, Mary Beth Hughes, Owen Davis, jr., Ernest Truex, in a richly comic part; Dennie Hughes and a host of others of coming out and college boy age. They do full justice to the music, dancing, comedy, pathos, romance and the one dash of tragedy mixed in this agreeable and lively charade. Lana Turner, Jane Bryan and Marsha Hunt are particularly worth watching.

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

By Madge Evans

(Stage and screen actress, who is today's guest columnist for Leonard Lyons.)

Dear Leonard Lyons:

ASK AN ACTRESS to write a guest column and what do you get?

A dissertation on "THEATA" every time!

But what's an actress to do? If she talks about herself, she's an egotist. If she talks politics, she's (1) outraging the publisher's generosity, (2) imposing her own opinion where it isn't wanted or (3) talking about something her husband wishes she'd keep still about!

Soooo, Mr. Lyons, it circles around to the theater again. After all, I've been on the stage or in pictures ever since I was a child, and a couple of weeks ago I cinched it when I became Mrs. Sidney Kingsley. "THEATA" is all I know so what else can I write about?

SPEAKING OF becoming Mrs. Sidney Kingsley, you'll excuse me if I talk a bit about that, won't you? Right after we were married a few weeks ago, all my Hollywood buddies wired congratulations with questions, most of them being along this line:

"How in the world are you going to be happy while married, if you are in pictures and Sidney is on Broadway?"

I'd like to clear that up here and now. I'm not going back to Hollywood for a while. I'm going to stay in New York with Sidney, and if my plans pan out I'm going to do a play on Broadway in the fall.

RIGHT NOW, I'm on the last leg of a straw hat tour which took me to Maine, Connecticut and Rhode Island. I did four plays, two of which had previously starred Ina Claire and two in which Katharine Hepburn had appeared.

These were by way of practice for my Broadway invasion. Sidney advised me to try comedy and tragedy so I chose S. N. Behrman and Jane Austen. Couldn't have chosen two more widely separated authors, do you think?

SIDNEY FIGURED that it was better for me to dash from a comedy like "Brief Moment" into a tragedy like "Pride and Prejudice," so I'd be rounding out the emotional gamut (no cracks, please, about the gamut from A to B.)

Well, I'm rounding it out the best I can and I think Sidney was right. There is no place like the straw hat circuit for educating the actress in the ways of the theater and for preparing the actress for what she hopes will be a season on Broadway.

MEANWHILE, people are also curious about my sudden preference for Broadway. They keep asking why I wasn't happy in Hollywood, why I hate pictures.

The answer to that is the fact that I was happy in Hollywood and I don't hate pictures. I just got tired of being the perennial ingenue in Hollywood. I got tired of smiling and smirking and wearing a sprigged muslin dress all the time. I got tired of flitting through pictures or two. In other words, I want to be a sophisticated player. Hollywood wouldn't let me grow up and get my teeth into something solid. I want to act—in capital letters. I want to do all kinds of parts.

THE STAGE can give me that opportunity. Pictures could have given it to me too, but if they had, I'd have been ruined for ingenue roles. On the stage, it's different. One role doesn't type you for keeps.

You can be a vixen one season, a little Nell the next and nobody "types" you permanently as one or the other.

In Hollywood, there's no happy medium. You're a menace or a sweet miss and you've got to stay on one side or the other.

So now, I'm beginning all over again on Broadway, where I started at 13 as John Barrymore's leading lady in "Peter Ibbetson." I don't know what play I'll do. I'll take comedy or tragedy or mystery or farce. I'll even take ingenue if the play suits me.

SIDNEY'S GOING to write more plays. If there's a part for me, I'm going to act in Sidney's plays. If there isn't, I'll try to get jobs in somebody else's plays.

All I want is a chance on the stage. And thanks for allowing me to talk about it!

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., Aug. 18.—Too bad that "Once Upon A Time," the Hans Christian Anderson story which Sam Goldwyn planned to do, won't be made after all. As you know, Andersen, weaver of our childhood fantasies, is the Danish national idol, and woe betide any studio if things went wrong with the handling of their hero's life story. Wonder what would happen if a foreign country decided to make life of Abraham Lincoln (we don't seem to mind that an Englishman portrays that role), or Washington or even a writer like Mark Twain. Would we make an international issue of it, or just take it all in our own peculiar democratic stride? Have the Danes a right to interfere with Hollywood's production plans?

HOPPER

Bob Burns says no matter how hot, when you go a-visiting don't sleep raw. At Van Buren he wore only lower part of his pajamas, when he went to sleep on first floor of hotel with four windows open. He had a subconscious feeling that someone was looking at him. Woke up at 5 a. m. and lo and behold there were hundreds of people peering in. Bob laughed: "You sure get up early to look at a worm." One onlooker remarked: "Brother, were you tearing it off?" That night at "Our Leading Citizen" he introduced an uncle who quickly caught on to Bob's exaggerations. When Bob said: "Uncle Amos has 24 dogs," Uncle got up and said: "Twenty-nine Bob. My little Nellie just had pups." "And all the time he knew I knew he only had two," said Bob.

It's funny to see the way George Brent and Ralph Forbes pal around together, because they are both former husbands of Ruth Chatterton. It's funnier, yet, to realize that because Ruth is no longer important news, that no one thinks anything about the peculiar angle of the Brent-Forbes alliance. Yet it was hot news when Ruth had to redecorate her house because George didn't like the way it was.

David Niven has gotten so deep in Sam Goldwyn's few remaining hairs that they've written in a cricket match for "Raffles." David can't explain why he wants it. Must be his longing for home.

Nice to have Una O'Connor back. Says she likes Hollywood better than London, 'cause she doesn't have to wear woolen undies here. She's in "We Are Not Alone."

Bet Leslie Howard wishes he were! Ducking process servers is no picnic; He's being sued for $70,000. While one of them waited outside Leslie's agent's office, Leslie exited wearing glasses, old clothes, hat turned down, and chauffered his agent down the boulevard.

And we love this studio faux pas. Newspapers carried a picture of a Miss Allen from the University of Montana, who is the only woman transportation superintendent in Hollywood. Caption said she was talking to one of her drivers. He happened to be Leslie Howard!

Incidentally, Frank McHugh says the reason we are drifting toward new world conflict is that a dictator is only as good as his last war.

"Dust Be My Destiny" is a misleading title for Garfield and Priscilla Lane's new picture, which is grand. Priscilla cries prettier than almost any actress we have. She's excellent. So is Garfield.

John Steinbeck is sponsoring a dance in September, proceeds to go to dust-bowlers. on't you love idea of Hollywood dancing money into palms of needy? What was that bout "While Rome Burns?

Cagney-Raft Joint Vehicle Moves to 'Met'

"Each Dawn I Die" Is an Expert and Stunning Melodrama

"Each Dawn I Die" is a stunning and expert melodrama. Its success last week at the Earle has sent it spinning directly to the Warner Brothers' Metropolitan, where it commenced its extended downtown engagement yesterday.

Not just another "prison picture," although its situations are not particularly novel, this James Cagney-George Raft co-starring film is forceful and engrossing because it is so expertly told.

Certainly, the crusading reporter is on the road to becoming a stock hero in the films, and political graft is no less common on the screen. But with a pace that is absorbing and with a stirring directness in characterization, this prison film is one of the most exciting to come from a studio that is renowned for its success in that direction.

Framed by a cooked political gang because of the crusading articles he has been writing for his paper, Cagney's reporter is thrown into a jail headed by a humane warden, but cursed with a powerful and cruel underling. This sadist is one of the most genuinely pitiless and ruthless creatures ever seen in American films. How the prison atmosphere wears down its inmates and how the reporter and a gangster "lifer" strike up a friendship is both convincing and compelling.

Ace Cast and Direction

That the more familiar episodes of prison pictures, such as the muttered talking in the "yard" and the inevitable "break," become so gripping lies with the excellent cast of established players and in the direction of William Keighley. Cagney's scene with the parole board, in which his control gives way to a vitriolic speech and then to a complete surrender to remorse, is a memorable display, and Raft's cold underplaying of the tenement boy with a warped attitude against the police is as expert.

It should be emphasized that "Each Dawn I Die" allows no glorification of the criminal, stressing, indeed, the unhealthy and repugnant qualities of these characters, which, not so many years ago, came close to becoming the heroic figures in such films. Neither does it make an unreasonable crusade against the law, stressing instead the weaknesses of both the good and the evil.

Jane Bryan, as the reporter's helpful fiancee, turns in one of those versatile performances which this reliable player has accustomed her audiences to expect. George Bancroft's understanding warden is a similarly restrained portrayal, and Stanley Ridges, Alan Baxter, Victor Jory, John Wray and Willard Robertson are others of note in the cast.

Short subjects and news events complete the Metropolitan's bill.

Columbia

Mickey Rooney continues to exploit adolescence and win $1,000,000 with the gleeful approbation of hordes of Rooney fans. Reserved for another week at the Columbia is "Andy Hardy Gets Spring Fever," which shows what can happen to an emotional and impressionable boy when he is so fortunate as to fall in love with an understanding older woman.

Helen Gilbert, the dramatics teacher, is the recipient of the outpourings and posturings of young Andy's torch-toting, and the easy graciousness and tenderness with which she handles the infantile genius is little short of inspiring. She and Judge Hardy, whom you may remember as Lewis Stone, run a close finish for handing out sugared philosophy in pills small enough for the little shaver to swallow.

Besides Andy's attack of and recovery from calf-love, the judge gets involved in some confidence racket about bauxite, from which he extricates himself, and at the finish all is serene, with Polly and Andy again united.

Singing praises for a hitherto unsung hero is "Prophet Without Honor," which tells of the nautical exploits of Matthew Fontaine Maury, who fathered the Weather Bureau, conceived the idea of the Panama Canal and envisioned the Atlantic cable.

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

By International News Service

Hollywood, Aug. 18.—I knew, as surely as tomorrow is Saturday, that Joan Crawford would not be costarred with Clark Gable in "Not Too Narrow, Not Too Deep," in spite of the insistence of several M-G-M'ers. That drama is not for Joan. I was right, too, for in five weeks she starts "Salute to Courage," an original by John Larkin and Jerry Horwin.

LOUELLA PARSONS

She wears some gorgeous gowns, as a model, in this modern story, which John Considine, jr., has been assigned to produce. Joan is one actress whom the fans expect to dress to the teeth. Gloria Swanson was another and, try as she would, she never did get away from dress-up parts. Joan had her fling as a heavy in "The Women" and now she returns to the type of screen entertainment that first brought her fame.

Almost simultaneously, Lynn Bari got rid of her appendix and drew herself a starring job at Twentieth Century-Fox. She leaves the hospital tomorrow and, as soon as she is sufficiently recovered from her appendectomy, she will report to her studio for the femme lead in "The City," an original by John Larkin. It will be made under the title of "Gambling House," which seems appropriate, since the locale is in one of those well-known dens of iniquity now under legal investigation. C. Aubrey Smith has one of the important roles and Ricardo Cortez is directing what sounds like a timely theme.

One of the most tragic stories in Hollywood is that of Dolly Haas. She is near a nervous breakdown since she left the cast of Paul Muni's "We Are Not Alone." When Miss Haas arrived here from Europe, fresh from her triumph in "Broken Blossoms," David Selznick and Harry Cohn actually battled to sign her. She finally went to Columbia, but never made a picture there. Then Warners, after several days shooting on the Muni picture, put Jane Bryan in her place. The unhappy Haas girl, who had had nothing but a series of disappointments since she came to America, is now down to 90 pounds, although she weighs only 103 normally. I'd like to see her really get a break, for it is distressing to think of anybody being as unhappy as she is at this moment. The ironical part is that her husband, John Brahm, who came with her, has been forging steadily ahead as a director.

You really have to take off your hat to Janet Gaynor (pardon me, Mrs. Gilbert Adrian) for the way she has managed her life and career. Janet is one of the richest women in Hollywood. She's never gone in for pink and blue swimming pools, long swanky cars or tennis courts by the gross. In fact, she rents the house she lives in between Beverly Hills and Hollywood — because she never felt she could afford to own one of the typical movie star estates. Her marriage to Adrian should be a very happy one, for it was not one of those overnight elopements too often repented in haste. Janet knew that they had the same interests and tastes and put their friendship to the test of a full year's courship before she said "I do" last week.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Johnny Weissmuller weds Beryl Scott at 1 a. m. Sunday in a Pennsylvania hamlet after the last aquacade show. They will have their wedding breakfast at the Stork Club, with Sherman Billingsley as their host. Ethel Merman has been invited to act as maid of honor. Boo Roos, Johnee's business manager, flew East today to give his official blessing; Garson Kanin, whose suspension from RKO we exclusively predicted, has gone to San Francisco to think things over. Can't really blame Kanin for not wanting "B" pictures, since he turned several B's into A's in the past; Ginger Rogers has vetoed her New York trip and will rest at Pebble Beach; W. C. Fields is in a Pasadena sanitarium for a rest, getting himself in condition for his Mae West picture.

The George Schaefers hosted a supper for Anna Nagle and Herbert Wilcox after the "Edith Cavell" preview; Lillian Gish, the Harold Lloyds, the Charles Laughtons, the Joseph Breens and Orson Welles were their other guests; Natalie Draper and John McClain, a new night-clubbing twosome; Richard Greene's mother returns to her native England for a visit. Virginia Fields, his newest heart-beat, went to the train with Richard to wish her bon voyage; Mrs. Dudley Field Malone and her young son in Hollywood to give Dudley a chance to see his boy. The Malones are separated, but still good friends; Alice Faye choo-chooing East to see her bridegroom, Tony Martin; Lillian Roth, recently divorced, at the Beverly Tropics with Abe Roth, who is now in the agency business; what's this—two nights running, Louise Stanley and the music publisher, Mose Gumble? William

That's all for today. See you tomorrow.

British Course In East Held Bid for Parley

Way Opened for U. S., French to Take Part, London Feels

Special Cable to The Post

London, Aug. 18.—The British government today made what was interpreted as a move to bring the United States and France into a conference with Japan about Nippon's demand for recognition of the "new order" in China, by informing Tokyo that in further discussion of Chinese currency and silver reserves "arrangements must be made to take into account the views of interested third parties."

This was the substance of new instructions from London, which British Ambassador Sir Robert Leslie Craigie conveyed to Japanese Envoy Kato. Simultaneously the United States and French governments were informed of Britain's decision.

Parley Breakdown Likely

Many observers believe it will cause the breakdown of the Anglo-Japanese negotiations about local issues at Tientsin, which Britain now refuses to widen into a bilateral bargain about China as a whole, without the presence at the council table of the United States, France and any other powers which should "sit in."

If the Anglo-Japanese talks about Tientsin, already virtually deadlocked, should be abandoned by Japan, and anti-British agitation intensified, informed quarters thought it was probable that Britain would not hesitate to retaliate by denouncing the Anglo-Japanese commercial treaty of 1911. The treaty would lapse one year after notice of denunciation.

Aid to China Possible

It also was believed Britain would back up abrogation of the treaty with further economic assistance to the Chinese government at Chungking. As a further means of pressure upon Japan, the British could hold out the possibility of enlarging the projected Anglo-Soviet-French pact of mutual assistance, to make it apply against Japan in the Far East, as well as against Germany and Italy in Europe.

Anticipating criticism from American isolationists that the British wanted the Americans to pull British chestnuts out of the fire, official quarters at London maintained the Chamberlain government had decided on these new orders for Ambassador Craigie "quite independently."

It was acknowledged, however, that Britain sought the views of the United States and France on the currency and silver questions after Japan raised the points earlier this summer.

U. S. Advised, Says Welles

Sumner Welles, Undersecretary of State, said yesterday the British government had informed Washington of its rejection of Japanese demands that Chinese economic questions be brought into current Tokyo conversations on the Tientsin dispute.

Welles said the United States often has interests in China either identical with or similar to those of other nations, including Great Britain.

There was no intimation in the British communication, he said, that a conference should be called of the Nine-Power Pact signatories.

Arsonist's Life Begins at 50, Firemen Are Told

College Park, Md., Aug. 18 (AP).—In contrast to murder, robbery and burglary, arson is a "crime of middle age," A. Bruce Bielaski, assistant manager of the National Board of Fire Underwriters told candidates for deputy fire marshal's posts here today.

Bielaski told the candidates, here from volunteer departments all over Maryland, that the average age of arsonists is past 50. The great bulk of criminals are under 25 years of age, but more than 75 per cent of all arsonists are past that age, Bielaski said.

Written examinations for deputy fire marshals were given the candidates today at the conclusion of the two-day training school.

Hazelton A. Joyce, deputy commissioner for the Maryland State fire marshal's department, spoke to the candidates on procedure for deputy fire marshals. Chief J. W. Just of the fire service extension school, University of Maryland, outlined procedure in incendiary fires.

Woman's Sketch Brings Capture of Robbery Suspect

Long Beach, Calif., Aug. 18 (AP).—A woman artist present at the $6,600 holdup July 21 of a Security First National branch bank went home and drew a sketch of one of the robbers.

Today, Deputy District Attorney William Brayton issued a complaint charging Morris Kessler, 30, of Chicago, with robbery.

Acting Police Capt. Otto Faulkner said the subject of the sketch was recognized by law enforcement officers and identification was completed today with arrival of photographs of Kessler from Chicago.

Hundreds See 'Prince of Peace' Play at N.Y. Fair

Special Dispatch to The Post

New York, Aug. 18.—Several hundred persons watched the first of two performances of "The Prince of Peace" at the Temple of Religion at the New York World's Fair this afternoon.

The drama of Biblical days was written by Minnie Frost Rands, of Washington, and was presented by the Prince of Peace players, also of Washington. The production is sponsored by the National Conference of Christians and Jews and the District Federation of Women's Clubs, of which Mrs. Rands is chairman of the drama committee.

The story deals with six episodes during the interim between the Old and New Testaments. Included in the cast of young women were three daughters of Mrs. Rands.

Nazis Take Slovakia Over; Troops Face Polish Flank

trated in a relatively small area about Zilina and that additional forces had been sent eastward along the frontier.

Slovakia, a part of the former Czecho-Slovak republic, voted its independence March 14, 1938, the day before Hitler declared a protectorate over Czech Bohemia and Moravia.

Assured Protection

The German Fuehrer, by a treaty of March 18, undertook to protect Slovakia, guaranteeing the boundaries for a period of 25 years. The treaty permitted the German armed foces at any time to construct and man military works in western Slovakia.

A part of Slovakia's original territory was sheared off on the eastern frontier April 4, when Hungary and Slovakia signed an accod which followed occupation of many villages on the frontier by Hungarian troops, who met resistance.

Tonight public buildings in many villages were used as temporary barracks by the German military command. German technicians were observed stringing telephone lines to the German garrison at Zilina.

Some Slovaks have carried on recent agitation for return of territory near Teschen, lost to Poland in the settlements last fall that followed Munich.

Meanwhile, in Berlin the feeling grew among diplomatic circles that the Danzig problem between Germany and Poland was nearing a decisive turn.

Two developments accounted for this: Hungarian Foreign Minister Count Csaky's Rome-Berlin axis visits and renewal of a violent anti-Polish campaign in the Nazi press.

Poles Clear Border

[The entire controlled press resounded with a new demand that a solution to the critical Danzig-Polish Corridor situation must be a matter of days, as a report was circulated the Poles were evacuating Germans in a 20-mile-wide zone along the border, the International News Service said.

[The reported evacuation was contained in a report by DNB, official Nazi news agency, from Beuthen. It stated that refugees reported Poland was forcing German minorities to clear out of a strip 20 miles wide on the Polish side of the frontier.

[Leading the clamor for haste in settlement of the Danzig-Polish Corridor matter was Chancellor Hitler's own newspaper, the Voelkischer Beobachter, which declared:

["Every wasted day increases the danger of war!"—Editor's note.]

Diplomats in Berlin anxiously awaited clarification of open assertions in some German quarters before Count Csaky left Munich by air today for Rome that Hungary had been won as "Germany's comrade in arms."

(A Hungarian foreign office spokesman in Budapest declared such statements were "entirely untrue.")

Diplomats wondered whether an announcement of Hungary's solidarity with the axis would result from Csaky's conversations in Germany and Italy.

Csaky Flies to Rome

And, they asked, would the admittedly tense situation between Germany and Poland over the future of the Free City of Danzig reach the breaking point soon thereafter?

Official German denials that Csaky had seen the top men of Adolf Hitler's regime were followed by an official announcement from Munich that he had taken a German government airplane to Rome.

The Nazi press was filled with stories of German refugees from Poland.

Calls Britain Vengeful

[In a quiter voice, but with no less bitterness, German official circles today repeated a now familiar German thesis. This has inevitably changed in the furor now going on. The earlier picture was of a sated England trying hopelessly by "encirclement" to block Germany's recovery of Danzig. This has now changed by a subtle fade-out process into a picture of a sinister and revengeful England stiffening aggressive and blood-thirsty Poles into an undeclared war of conquest against Germany.

[Foreigners who have watched similar Nazi campaigns in the past have begun to doubt even Dr. Paul Josef Goebbels' power to turn off the political heat which has now been generated here without either a war or a "second Munich." In unofficial, but well-informed German circles, the cancellation of the Tennenberg celebration a week from next Sunday was freely predicted tonight as a sure result of the advanced stage which the "war of nerves" has already reached here.

Peace Moves Suppressed

[Whatever the effect on German readers of this hullaballoo, they remain almost entirely ignorant of the comings and goings of diplomats on which now depend almost the only hope of peace in central Europe. The German press is still busy denying foreign reports that any conference or negotiation over Danzig is thinkable, let alone desirable to Germany.

[The British Ambassador, Sir Nevile Henderson, called at the foreign office today, but no details of his conversations there were officially available. At the same time it was reported here that both the French and the English ambassadors had taken pains in recent days to repeat to the German government their own countries' specific obligations to Poland in the event of any precipitate German action to incorporate Danzig in the Reich.—Editor's note.]

Human interest pictures showing men, women and children from Upper Silesia, Pomorze (the Polish Corridor) and even other parts of Poland under the care of the Nazi welfare organization reminded students of German affairs that similar pictures of refugees from Sudetenland marked the last stages of the German-Czech crisis last summer.

These pictures were accompanied by accounts by the refugees themselves of alleged maltreatment by Polish officials and Polish troops.

It was said 76,000 refugees already had filtered across the border and were put up in temporary barracks if unfit for work or given immediate employment if fit.

Newspapers also emphasized accounts of alleged Polish acts of terrorism in the Ukrainian section of Poland.

From Warsaw came word that the Polish government "may yet be compelled" to release "full details of mistreatment of Poles in Germany."

"For the time being," it was stated, "Poland does not desire to sharpen Polish-German relations further, but our evidence in this respect is complete, should events force us to release it."

Official circles further stated that two-thirds of the "more than 200 persons" arrested Wednesday in the drive against alleged anti-Polish activity and espionage by the German minority have been released. The investigation, it was stated, is continuing.

The Polish press did report today that a large chamber of Poles in German Silesia have been forcibly moved inland, away from the frontier, and that children of these Poles are being separated from their parents and being sent to "special camps."

Forest Fires Out of Control; Kill 1, Injure 3

San Francisco, Aug. 18 (INS).—At least one death was charged tonight to California's forest fires, still raging uncontrolled on widely scattered fronts.

The body of Joe Calandra, forest ranger of King City, was found in the Santa Lucia Mountains, where he was trapped by flames yesterday.

Five fires in central California were still out of control tonight. After sweeping over 108,000 acres.

At least three firefighters were injured.

Pershing Plans Annual Check At Walter Reed

Nearly 79, He Will Resume Work Soon On Autobiography

By Edward T. Folliard

Gen. John J. Pershing, who will be 79 on September 13, has recovered to such an extent from his grave illness of February, 1938, that he is planning to resume work on his autobiography, it was learned yesterday.

First, however, the still erect commander of America's World War Army, will spend some time in Walter Reed Hospital undergoing his annual physical check-up. He plans to go immediately to the hospital on his arrival here from New York.

When he leaves Walter Reed, he is expected to follow his custom and lease a suite at the Carlton Hotel, a suite usually shared by the general, Miss May Pershing, his sister, and Master Sergt. C. C. Shaeffer, his orderly for 18 years.

Hollywood Interested

November will find the A. E. F. leader on his way to Tucson, Ariz., and it is there that he plans to resume work on the story of his long and adventurous life.

Hollywood is understood to be interested in the autobiography, and at one time a well-known producer was reported to have opened negotiations for it. Gen. Pershing, it was further reported, was seriously interested, and had even gone so far as to express the hope that Gary Cooper could play the principal role.

Gen. Pershing already has published his World War memoirs. Historically important as that volume was, it was dry reading compared with the story he has been working on for the last ten years or more, and which was interrupted by his brush with death a year and a half ago in Tuscon.

Begins in Missouri

It is a story that begins with his boyhood in Missouri. After a brief period as school teacher, he entered West Point in 1882. He saw action as a cavalryman immediately after he was graduated, being sent down to Arizona under Gen. Nelson A. Miles to fight Geronimo and his wily Apaches. Then came a campaign against the Sioux in the Dakotas, and after that a hero's role at Santiago in Cuba. His subjugation of a Moro chieftain in the Philippines made him a national figure and also the center of a bitter controversy when President Theodore Roosevelt jumped him over 800 fellow officers in promoting him to brigadier general.

He was a junior major general when he led a punitive expedition into Mexico against Villa in 1916. It was in recognition of that service that he was chosen over all his seniors to command the American Expeditionary Force in France.

Gen. Pershing is the last of the great Allies commanders in the World War. Foch of France, Haig of England, Diaz of Italy, and Grand Duke Nicholas of Russia—all these are gone, along with Hindenburg of Germany. Only Ludendorff, of Germany, is alive.

70 Are Indicted For WPA Riots In Minneapolsi

St. Paul, Aug. 18 (AP).—Criminal indictments were returned against an estimated 70 defendants by the Federal grand jury today as an outgrowth of the recent WPA strike riots in Minneapolis.

Based on violence climaxed by deaths of two persons, the indictments charge violation of the 1939 emergency relief act, which makes it a felony to prevent Federal work relief clients from obtaining relief benefits.

All secret because none of the defendants is yet under arrest, the indictments were returned in a report to Federal Judge Robert G. Bell.

Japanese Punish Woman's Slapper

Shanghai, Aug. 18 (AP).—A Japanese spokesman said tonight the Japanese sentry responsible for the slapping of Mrs. F. M. Richard, a 59-year-old American woman, at Tientsin had "been duly punished in accordance with military discipline."

He refused, however, to divulge what the punishment was.

Missionary Priest Tells of Bombs Falling On China, Where He Is Resolved to Return

SISTER LYDIA NURSE ESTHER McLAIN FATHER GEHRING

Father Frederick Gehring, Vincentian missionary who spent six years in China, is shown at Providence Hospital, where he has been appointed chaplain

The Rev. Frederick Gehring, a Vincentian missionary, who returned to America in June after six years in China, yesterday told of his work and the falling bombs, of China's struggle, of how a Chinese general responded to his kindness and then of his plan to go back and labor six more years —in a country at peace, he hopes.

Father Gehring is a handsome man with a strong chin, a quiet voice and but little to say of the terrors he left in the East. Telling his story in his office at Providence Hospital, where he has been appointed chaplain for a period that will enable him to get treatment for an eye infection, he spoke mostly of the 25 American Vincentian fathers and six Sisters of Charity who are carrying on where he, temporarily, left off.

Planes Fly Low

These sisters include two from Providence Hospital—Sisters Clara and Vincent—he said. "These six are doing the work of 20," he began. "They have a small hospital and last year cared for 50,000 dispensary cases. Now they also have wounded and dying brought to their mission compound. They try to feed and clothe the refugees. The Chinese government has recognized their work and is giving some assistance.

The dying and wounded are brought in on stretchers and in rickshaws. Their city, Kanchow, in the remote Kiangsi Province, has been bombed 15 times. Many people were killed."

There is a great need now for such sisters and nurses in all parts of the stricken country, the priest said. "Bombs have fallen within 100 yards of me. I do not say that the bombs were aimed at our church or our hospital. But the planes would fly low and the bombs would fall with a terrible concussion."

The face of the priest lighted up when he was asked about China's resistance. He did not want to discuss the politics of the war, or the rights and wrongs of it. "But I marvel at the Chinese resistance, their carrying on day after day in the face of such punishment." He likes the Chinese, seeing them as a warm, kindly people.

For there was the man who came to the mission one day, saying brightly: "Hello, misters, I'm Charley Wong, from Chicago. I'm a good barber." Charley had returned to fight for the good earth—but a general heard about him and assigned him to cutting hair.

There was the Chinese general whom Father Gehring taught English. The general was very appreciative.

Three years after school let out for him he rode 300 miles into the hinterland to bring the priest a horse as a present.

But there also were the bandits. Father Gehring only smiles when he speaks of them. They were very bothersome fellows back in 1935. Word suddenly would reach the mission that the bandits were coming and all would flee to the surrounding hills until the outlaws moved along. And they never left without leaving behind their calling card in the form of damage.

Bandits Bothersome

Father Gehring came to love China. He says it gets a hold on a man. This may have caused the plight of China to reflect so much in his face at moments.

"Great hordes of them could be seen moving inland, walking, carrying their pitiful belongings. They overflowed the missions. Along the roads many of them died."

During this year in America, the priest's headquarters will be at Germantown, Philadelphia. He is helping now with arrangements for the Catholic Mission Crusade, to be held at Catholic University August 20-25, to the end of creating interest in the missions. Missionaries from many parts of the world will attend.

Roper Resigns As Minister of U. S. to Canada

Woodring Reported Planning to Quit for Diplomatic Post

Aboard U. S. S. Lang, Bay of Islands, Newfoundland, Aug. 18 (AP).—Former Secretary of Commerce Daniel C. Roper has resigned as United States minister to Canada.

In a press conference aboard the cruiser Tuscaloosa, President Roosevelt disclosed he had accepted the resignation before leaving Hyde Park.

He said he had sent Roper a letter of regret and thanked him for his willingness to take the post temporarily during the recent visit of King George and Queen Elizabeth of England.

At Ottawa Roper assured Canadian friends in a statement on his resignation that he and Mrs. Roper would "hang out the latchstring on our door in Washington" for them.

In reviewing events during his service in Ottawa, Roper said:

"It is my opinion that when the history of these times is recorded that two events in the development of understanding among our peoples will stand out conspicuously, namely: (1) the efforts of President Roosevelt to develop the good neighbor policy among nations, and (2) the visit of King George VI and Queen Elizabeth to Canada and the United States in 1939."

Today the President ried fishing for the famed salmon in the Humber River. When asked about his luck he gave the time-worn excuse:

"I hooked into a big one—but it got away."

However, the President's secretary, Gen. Edwin M. Watson, caught an 18-pounder the President described as an "Adonis" among fish.

Woodring Mentioned

Special Dispatch to The Post

The retirement of Daniel C. Roper as American Minister to Canada yesterday served to revive the report that Harry L. Woodring, Secretary of War, will leave the Cabinet to make way for Louis Johnson, Assistant Secretary.

According to the report Mr. Woodring, who is said to be ambitious to get into diplomatic service on a high plane before he retires from Washington, may be prevailed upon to accept the Ottawa post. Woodring also is said to have his eyes on the American Embassy in London. However, the President is understood to be using every device to induce Joseph P. Kennedy to remain in this important post, despite his known desire to return to private life.

Robbins Named Commodity Credit Corporation Head

Carl B. Robbins, former California business man, was named yesterday as president of the Commodity Credit Corporation by Secretary of Agriculture Wallace. He succeeded Lynn P. Talley, assistant to the board of directors of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

The credit corporation, transferred to the Department of Agriculture under one of the President's reorganization plans, makes loans to producers on commodities stored as collateral. Robbins at one time taught economics and finance at Leland Stanford University.

Chandler to Back Roosevelt, if He Gets Nomination

New York, Aug. 18 (AP).—Gov. A. B. (Happy) Chandler of Kentucky, who lost the 1938 Democratic senatorial primary election to Senator Barkley, Administration leader, said tonight in an interview that he would support President Roosevelt if he were nominated for a third term.

Here for Kentucky day at the New York World's Fair, Chandler remarked he always had been a regular party man and:

"I will support the Democratic nominees."

"Yes," he went on, in response to a question as to whether that included President Roosevelt, "if he's nominated, I'll support him."

Chandler declined to say whether he believed Mr. Roosevelt would or should run again.

Elaborating on his statement, Chandler said:

"The President has just said that if they don't nominate the candidate he wants, he won't be able to offer his support." Then he added he always had thought "everybody from the President all the way down should support the nominees of the party."

William S. Hart Is Vindicated in Paternity Case

Hollywood, Aug. 18 (INS).—Appearing in court wearing the sombrero which, for many years, was his trademark on the screen, William S. Hart, film hero of heroes, today won a battle for vindication of a charge brought 20 years ago by a woman who falsely accused him of being the father of her child.

The court ordered returned to the actor a trust fund he set up for the child that he knew was not his own. The fund now totals $13,265.

The woman, Miss Elizabeth MacCaulley, whose accusation forced the screen hero to put aside the money, confessed years later that the whole thing was a hoax and the child was not hers.

Cowboy Bandit Pleads With Wife To Save His Life

Chicago, Aug. 18 (INS).—Most of his bravado gone, Jack Russell, "singing cowboy" bandit, was in a cell at the county jail tonight begging his estranged wife to help save him from the electric chair.

Russell was brought to Chicago today from the State penitentiary at Macalester, Okla., to stand trial for the murder of William S. Hamilton, one of four men he kidnaped after escaping from the Oklahoma prison early last month.

On arrival he pleaded for a chance to telephone his wife, Mrs. Mary Russell. He said to her:

"Hello, honey, won't you please come down and see me? Please, you've got to save me from the hot seat."

Fire on U. S. Ship Is Under Control

Boston, Aug. 18 (AP).—Fire which raged in the wool and cotton cargo of the American freighter Labette today was brought under control by gasmasked firemen.

Zorina Insures Legs for $250,000

Hollywood, Aug. 18 (INS).—Zora, the famous dancer, is not going to take any chances with fate. Today she insured her twinkling toes for $250,000, effective during October and November, while she is in Europe.

Well, it seems that Zora consulted a prominent astrologer about this and that, and the astrologer warned her that inasmuch as she was born under the sign of Capricorn, she should be careful of her feet during the approaching cool months.

Fish Peace Plan Scrapped at Oslo

Oslo, Norway, Aug. 18 (U.P.).—The steering committee of the Interparliamentary Union Congress tonight scrapped a resolution proposed by Representative Hamilton Fish, jr., of New York, asking a 30-day European "political armistice" in the interests of peace.

Fish, ridiculed by a Paris newspaper as a sucker for Nazi intrigue after conferring earlier in the week with German Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop, asked the "armistice" pending a meeting of the foreign ministers of Britain, France, Germany and Italy to seek a peaceful European settlement.

Forster Defies Polish 'Threat' Against Danzig

Nazi Leader Voices Determination to Fight for Free City

Danzig, Aug. 18 (INS).—Sounding the keynote "better to die than become Polish," Albert Forster, Danzig's Nazi leader, today told thousands of his cheering followers that the Free City was determined to fight to defend itself against Poland.

Forster charged that Poland "threatens" the Free City in spite of the fact Danzig "now has a most modern army with the most modern equipment."

"In the very nature of things, therefore," he thundered, "Danzig had to create her own protective force for her population."

The task of Nazi forces within the Free City will be to protect the port against Poland should the latter take action "from within or without," Forster shouted.

Places Onus on Poland

Foreign observers interpreted the Nazi leader's speech as an obvious attempt to place the onus of any possible future conflict directly upon Poland.

Declaring Danzig's army to be "the most modern with the most modern equipment," Forster continued:

"Today Danzig receives the swastika banner as a sign of her kinship with the Reich."

Forster spoke during ceremonies in the first parade of the Danzig defenses forces, which include the Danzig police and militia. He presented colors, a swastika banner, to the black "heimwehr" storm troopers.

Commander Getz, who accepted the colors from Forster, drew a thunderous cheer when he said:

"We will always defend it. Better to die than become Polish."

Sees City Threatened

Forster referred to the past 20 years during which Danzig had no army, saying the League of Nations Treaty provided for Polish protection of the Free City.

"Now Danzig is threatened by the very power to which she should look for protection," he declared.

Forster tomorrow will officiate at the opening of a new 800-foot pontoon bridge across the Vistula River, built in record time, which will enable the heaviest vehicles to cross speedily between Danzig and East Prussia.

Japanese Fliers Get U. S. Permit For World Flight

The Civil Aeronautics Authority granted permission yesterday for a Japanese airplane to fly over Alaska and the continental United States on a round-the world flight.

The plane, a twin-motored transport, will be flown by Sumitoshi Nakao and will carry two passengers and a crew of four.

The route from Nome, Alaska, to Miami, Fla., is by way of Fairbanks, Whitehorse, Canada; Juneau, Seattle, San Francisco, Los Angeles, Kansas City, New York and Washington.

Officials said the permit would allow the flight to be made at any time before September 30.

Military Fields Open Today for 'Aviation Day'

National Aviation Day will be observed here today with "open house" at Bolling Field and the Naval Air Station, Anacostia, and cut-rate flights.

Official participation in the celebration of Orville Wright's birthday will be confined to opening all Army and Navy air fields to the public and flights over a few cities by naval planes. As this comes less than three weeks after the Air Corps' thirtieth birthday, the Army is not taking an active part in the ceremonies.

Locally, the event is sponsored by the Junior Board of Commerce, which has arranged for five local flying fields to take persons up at 50 cents a ride. Flights can be made at the Capital Airport, Bladensburg, Beacon Field and Hybla Valley Airport, Alexandria, Congressional Airport, Rockville, and the College Park, Md., Airport.

Final Draft Begun On Anglo-Polish Military Treaty

London, Aug. 18 (INS).—In what might be interpreted as Britain's answer to German demands for speedy acquisition of Danzig and the olish Corridor, final drafting of the Anglo-Polish military treaty began today.

This treaty, believed to be for five years, is to replace the temporary guarantees given Poland last fall after the dismemberment of Czecho-Slovakia.

Only the technical work of the legal draughtsmen and translators remains to be completed.

Devoted Public Servant

Frank R. Jelleff's intelligent efforts to eliminate the causes of local crime, and to rehabilitate young men who have run afoul of the law, form one of the bright spots in the social annals of Washington. As a founder of the Washington Boys' Club and, more recently, as chairman of the District Parole Board, Mr. Jelleff has been instrumental in saving a large number of boys from lives of lawlessness. His long years of service in this field stand out with special prominence in a community that is often lacking in civic initiative.

In grateful appreciation of this service, the District Commissioners have reappointed Mr. Jelleff to a new seven-year term as a member of the Parole Board. This post cannot, however, be considered a material reward for work well done. It carries no salary. It merely gives Mr. Jelleff an opportunity to continue the public-spirited service for which he is so admirably fitted. The city is indeed fortunate that men of his caliber are willing to give a large part of their time to this basic problem of community life.

Only a few years ago the Parole Board had but one field officer to supervise the activities of those authorized to complete their sentences outside of prison walls. Naturally the result was unsatisfactory. The earnest appeals of Mr. Jelleff and other members of the board for an adequate staff have born fruit in appropriations for four field officers and a stenographer. Two additional parole officers are still needed—one for service inside Lorton Reformatory and the other for field work. But substantial progress has been made.

At the conclusion of Mr. Jelleff's appeal for funds before the House sub-committee on District appropriations last February Chairman Collins said: "Very frankly, if it is granted it will be because of the high opinion this committee has of you." Part of the amount sought was granted. It is especially appropriate that Mr. Jelleff should continue at the head of the board now that it has a real opportunity to develop a scientific parole system.

As Mr. Jelleff told the House committee, 80 per cent of those whose cases go before the Parole Board are boys. Many of them are behind prison bars only because they had no constructive way of spending their time and drifted into crime for want of something better to do. From long experience Mr. Jelleff knows the psychology and the problems of these boys. It is the District's good fortune that he has again accepted a post in which he can exercise his talent for building citizenship.

Landless Peasants

In both Poland and Hungary the land problem has been one of the most difficult the governments of those countries have had to confront. Both countries have been countries of large landed estates with the great majority of peasants forced to eke out a living on holdings of wholly inadequate size.

Thus, according to the 1921 census, 19,000 landowners in Poland held farms totalling 43 per cent of the total area under cultivation. On the other hand, 2,111,000 families lived on farms ranging from five hectares (12½ acres) to two hectares or less. From the very outset of the Polish republic, therefore, a strong and insistent demand for the partition of the large estates has made itself felt.

A similar situation has obtained in Hungary, where the concentration of land ownership has been even more marked. And while in both countries land reform measures have been instituted, the process has not gone as far as the peasantry demand.

In Hungary this circumstance has given an effective talking point to the Nazis, who have sought to win over the peasants on the issue. In Poland the land situation has given rise to serious social and economic problems.

It is interesting that in both countries the pressure of necessity has resulted in a hastening of the land partitioning movement. The Magyar government finds it necessary to do so to steal the Nazi thunder. And in Poland the partition of large estates along the western border has now been ordered as a military measure.

However valuable in the long run, the fact that the present effort is being undertaken under duress may militate against its immediate effectiveness. In Hungary it remains a question whether the speeding up of land division will check the advance of German influence. While in Poland it may—since many of the border landlords are Germans—increase the already grave tensions between Warsaw and Berlin.

Justice And Formality

Judges of the District Municipal Court manifested a progressive concept of justice the other day when they adopted "in principle" a set of new rules to govern the hearing of landlord-tenant cases. After the simplified regulations have been subjected to technical revision they will undoubtedly be put into effect, with great advantage to the 60,000 renters who find themselves involved in legal proceedings each year.

The public has no great interest in the exact procedural changes to be effected. But it should have a profound interest in the broadening concept of justice which these changes reflect. It is not enough to establish courts that will render justice to those who are familiar with the law, or who can afford to hire an attorney. The interests of the individual must be protected in the courts, without regard for the bulge of his pocketbook or the quality of his education. That, in effect, is the principle which the Municipal Court has voted to accept.

"I consider it to be extremely important that the great masses of our population, the poor and the uneducated, feel that justice is made for them, as well as for their more fortunate brothers," said Sefton Darr, president of the District Bar Association, in urging this reform on the local court. "Satisfaction on the part of the majority of our people with the processes of justice is an insurance against the taking root of 'isms' in the United States, and a guarantee of the continuance of our great democracy."

Mr. Darr's effective arguments, along with those of the Washington Housing Association, doubtless made a favorable impression upon the judges. But he might also have declared that equal justice before the law is a first essential of any democracy worthy of the name. Actually the Municipal Court of the Nation's Capital should be chagrined that it has taken so long to adjust its rules to the needs of the rank and file.

Moreover, a majority of the judges have not yet approved the proposal that cases in this category be heard at 2 p. m. instead of 9:30 a. m. as at present. There seems no question that the public convenience would be served by this proposed change. Because of that fact a Bar Association committee has approved afternoon hearings for rent cases, in spite of the inconvenience they would entail for lawyers.

It would be a pity if the judges, having given simple justice precedence over formality, should fail to realize that courts should serve the public convenience in every respect.

'And Peace Attend Thee'

There seems to be something at once pathetic and ominous in the recent story about a Mr. Hamilton, of Silver Spring, Md., whose habits have got him into some difficulties with his fellow townsmen and the police.

It seems that Mr. Hamilton's neighbors cannot sleep because of the violent noises that have been emerging in the early morning hours from the radio on his sleeping porch. On the other hand, Mr. Hamilton apparently cannot sleep without the noise.

This impasse was illustrated the other night when the police, responding to indignant telephone complaints from the neighbors, tiptoed onto the porch where Mr. Hamilton slept blissfully as a babe and turned his radio off. In a very short time Mr. Hamilton was wide awake and complaining to the same policemen that somebody was interfering with his rest. But Mr. Hamilton's neighbors, it seems, have the law on their side and now he is charged with violating the anti-noise ordinance.

One of these days Mr. Hamilton's neighbors may find the tables turned. Soon it may be necessary to exchange our laws forbidding superfluous noise for laws forbidding peace and quiet. So much has loud noise become the concomitant of our civilization that there are thousands, perhaps millions, to whom it has become as necessary as food and air and the affection of their families.

Not that these persons pay much conscious attention to the noise when they have it, but when they discover they are no longer being admonished to eat Crunchits or to wash freely with Sybaris Soap, they fall prey to that emotional insecurity which the new psychology declares to be at the bottom of almost all neuroses. We venture to guess that more than one pitiful case of chronic insomnia or other anxiety ailment has developed in New York City since the demolition of the Sixth avenue elevated.

Mr. Hamilton seems to be representative of a growing minority that may soon become a majority. Soon none of us may find it possible to remain sane unless some kind of unconscionable racket is going on at every moment.

Perhaps it may come to the point where an agonized mayor of a stricken community might send to the Red Cross some such appeal as this:

"In the name of mercy rush all available swing bands, steam calliopes, fire sirens, locomotive whistles, torch singers, barbers, carnival barkers and Congressmen. Something has happened to our electric power system and all the loud speakers have gone off. Half the town is already insane."

Let us hope the poor fellow could make himself heard.

Palestine Again.

Great Britain's recent White Paper proposals regarding Palestine continue to meet with a cool reception.

The proposals include abandonment of the present British mandate in ten years, to be followed by transfer of the administration of the Holy Land to a Palestinian state in which full equality is to be accorded Arabs and Jews. With Jewish immigration to be restricted during the next five years, and possibly cut off altogether thereafter, the Jews would be a permanent minority in the new state.

The White Paper was denounced by the Arabs for not going far enough and by the Zionists as constituting, in effect, repudiation of the solemn pledges assumed by Great Britain when it issued the Balfour declaration 22 years ago. It met with sharp criticism in the House of Commons and now four of the seven participating members of the League Mandate Commission have found the White Paper inconsistent with the obligations of the British mandate.

In reply to the commission's strictures, the British government has issued what amounts to a plea in extenuation. It takes issue with the thesis of the majority of the commission that the White Paper contravenes the mandate on several vital points. But its arguments are none too convincing.

On the crucial question of Jewish immigration, of the more importance at this time in view of the fact that Palestine has been one of the few available places of settlement for Jewish refugees, the British government case seems specious.

In the past Jewish immigration has reasonably been restricted to Palestine's absorptive capacity. But that absorptive capacity has proved much greater than was at first deemed possible. Now the London government is arguing that absorptive capacity merely fixes an upper limit on immigration, and that in fixing the quota other considerations must be deemed of equal importance. This bears all the earmarks of an afterthought.

The real justification advanced by Great Britain in support of its Palestine plan is political rather than juridical. With the real or presumed need of appeasing the Arabs at a time when their good will is unquestionably of importance to Great Britain, the British government has proposed a solution which is more easily reconciled with Arab Nationalist demands than with the mandate for Palestine.

It is easy to sympathize with the British dilemma. But the fact that the administration of the mandate has become politically hazardous is a very limited justification for the British plan.

Public Interest

Because Washington is an essentially non-industrial town, it is seldom confronted with a labor dispute of formidable proportions. The strike at the Smoot Sand & Gravel Co. directly involves only some 200 employes and therefore may not seem a major matter. But it is becoming serious for the construction industry of the city, which is largely dependent on that company for certain essential materials.

Thus hundreds of men are already involuntarily out of work as a result of this strike, with the possibility of many more being affected soon if the trouble continues. Public and private construction both are being delayed. Streets have been left unpaved in spots where utility work was under way and Washington is faced with aggravation of an already serious unemployment problem.

As the public is so vitally affected by this dispute, it has every right to expect a settlement as quickly as possible. Already the strike has dragged on some time with no visible progress. As far as can be gathered, one reason for this is that the company has not shown an interest in settlement comparable with its key position in the local building industry. It is obvious that no dispute can be settled if either side refuses to face the issues.

Fortunately the community has at hand the expert conciliation service of the Department of Labor, which is at present working hard for a friendly settlement. Public interest lies with the department's efforts to have existing differences faced and settled reasonably as soon as possible.

"Some one has discovered in New Guinea a tribe of people who have been out of touch with civilization for 25 years." Some people have all the luck.

Taken Seriously

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In your article of August 11, on the Sport Page, entiled "Vogue Plays No Part in Style for Bleacherites," you called the "World Champion New York Yankees" "a bunch of bushwhackers."

Unless you were misinformed, this "bunch of bushwhackers" won the world's championship for three consecutive years and are going to win the fourth.

Do you think those "sandlot bums" which sneaked into the American League, you know what club I mean, the "Washington Senators," will ever come close to the first division, let alone winning a pennant?

Take a tip from me, the "Washington Senators" are strictly a second-division team. Imagine, the home team is 24½ games behind the New York Yankees and you call the league-leading team "bushwhackers."

You Washington fans are the poorest and most jealous fans in both leagues, never giving a ball player a break when he is in a "slump." For example, Zeke Bonura.

If you want a team like the Yankees, tell Clark Griffith to buy material that is good, not that might be good with a little help. Bucky Harris is not Connie Mack.

So the Yankees are "bushwhackers," with the Washington Senators 24½ games behind them.

A BASEBALL FAN.

Munitions Sale

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In The Post of August 15 I read an account of the sale of an American munitions factory to the Japanese, accompanied by a loan of $5,000,000. To many Americans this will seem very much like giving "aid and comfort to the enemy", and to my mind stops little short of treason. It makes me wonder to just what lengths some people will go in pursuit of profit.

I do not know whether the State Department could have prohibited this sale or not, I do know that it did not approve it. But the American people can protest against such transactions and should do so.

MAY HEALY.
Edgewater, Md., Aug. 16.

Anti-Noise Campaign

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: News of the latest assault against needless noise—and that means motor horns—is good news. But we heard the same thing several years ago. In the interim the condition has grown about 20 per cent worse; the horn squawking more violent, vindictive and nerve-shattering.

Really there's only a certain element, but a too large percentage it is true, who blow horns, but they can be stopped. I speak as a driver-pedestrian of 17 years' experience who practically never blows a horn.

Visitors declare, and I can back them up from personal experience, that in the suburbs of many cities more important than Washington, you have reasonable gamble of getting a night's sleep without being practically catapulted from your cot by senseless yapping horns. But not in the hick town of America, Washington.

A few kids on a street or a stray bicyclist is the signal for a veritable blast by the mistake behind the driver's seat, but never a sign of slowing down or elementary driving care.

The situation on lower Fourteenth and Fifteenth streets can only be described as bedlam. Nearly all the uproar is contributed by standing cars.

A family that deserted Washington some years ago for the farm came back to visit old scenes. Meaning to stay several weeks they picked a spot remote from the downtown hurly-burly. After a week they gave it up and went back to America. Their nerves hadn't grown diseased enough from long residence here to permit them to stand it.

This anti-blare campaign is worth a vigorous, all-embracing effort which should not cease and should extend to radio, posters, billboards and circulars distributed with permits. Nearly every afflicted spot, abroad and at home, has done something about it—except Washington.

I. H. LATIMER.

Deplores

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The exchange of views between Mr. Turner Rose and "A Proud Southerner" has been interesting to one who has recently returned from a long residence abroad. "A Proud Southerner" is to be complimented upon his defense of the South and his enumeration of only a few of the South's many contributions to our national welfare. His letter is commendably free from sectional bitterness.

In this day of overwhelming national and international problems it is unfortunate that sectionalism should exist among Americans. Too many seem to forget that the whole is greater than any of its parts. Every section should be proud of the achievements of any other section and, likewise, be concerned with the problems of other sections.

My Northern Civil War grandfather taught me to be very sympathetic with the South, to abhor the so-called "Reconstruction," and to deplore the activities of Stevens, Sumner, and other Northerners responsible for a period of American history of which no Northerner is proud.

The past is past, and no amount of sectionalism will contribute to any constructive achievement. All Americans are justly pround of the South's recovery and of the men and women who worked toward that end under terrific handicaps. It is regrettable that there are too many professional sectionalists in all parts of the country.

Sectionalism seems childish to one who has looked at America as a whole from a great distance. Is it not possible for all Americans to think more generously in terms of the whole while still cherishing the memory of all that was splendid in the past of all sections? Neither blame nor praise for the past belongs entirely to any one section or group. Is it not elementary wisdom for all Americans to be motivated with a spirit of "With malice toward none, with charity for all?"

A PROUD AMERICAN.
Washington, Aug. 17.

Waking Up

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The trouble in this country is that the great mass of so-called middle class people, those thrifty ones who work hard and save money, who have savings accounts and life insurance, and who pay the taxes, are being exploited by the present Administration, which has yielded to the pressure of minority groups, to aid, abet and support the so-called have-nots. This is done to keep in power the present Administration, which has made a point of antagonizing the business interests of this country on one pretext or another, and yet looks to them to solve the unemployment problem and pay the necessary taxes.

It seems incredible that the American people will be content to put up with this sort of thing indefinitely. It has gone too far already; but there is now evidence that the tide has turned.

To talk about "liberalism" and "conservatism" is to create confusion. This country has made its greatest advances under the Republican Party. High wages and prosperity were achieved by private enterprise during the rule of the Republican Party without Government pump priming or other Government activity; and it can be done again when the pressure against private enterprise is lifted. Lack of confidence, due to Government antagonism, is the main reason for failure of the business cycle to make further and more rapid progress on the upgrade.

Child Labor In The District

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: When Judy Garland, the movie star, appeared at a local theater, her manager was penalized $25 for violation of the child labor law which, in the District of Columbia, forbids girls and boys to work before 7 o'clock in the morning and after 7 o'clock in the evening. The fine, however, was not imposed by a court. Rather, it was forfeited collateral. The merits of the case, therefore, did not have formal hearing. Had they been reviewed, the result might have been helpful to a number of young artists whose advancement is now handicapped by a regulation not altogether wisely framed.

Yet there are certain dangers in some proposals to change the law. There was a time when children were exploited by parents and employers, and no friend of the youth of Washington would wish a return to that unhappy period. It is necessary to protect young workers even from their own exuberant ambitions. But the rule ought not to be so rigid as to interfere with the progress of careers of definite promise.

For example, playing in public is part of the education of a youthful musician. He or she should be granted whatever opportunities may be natural in the circumstances. The school authorities commonly recognize the advantages offered by school entertainments. Similarly, no police officer would arrest the Bishop of Washington for permitting his choristers to sing in an evening presentation of an oratorio at the cathedral.

A "sweet reasonableness" surely is wanted in consideration of the whole problem. Miss Garland suffered no hurt of body, mind or spirit during her visit to the Nation's Capital. In effect, her sponsor simply was obliged to pay an extra license fee. Her local contemporaries, earning little if anything from their "commercial" efforts, could ill afford such a tax and it could not be imposed upon their parents equitably. Some if not all of those charged with the enforcement of the law regret the responsibility laid upon them.

It is their unconcealed hope that Congress will amend the statute in line with a more rational and just conception of what young artists can do, wish to do and should be allowed to do—at least experimentally—in their quest for as much fame and fortune as a turbulent world permits them to gain.

Tarzan The German-Eater

ALVA JOHNSTON, in a recent magazine article (Saturday Evening Post), explains a bit of pre-Nazi literary discrimination by Germans. In 1925, he says, Edgar Rice Burroughs was taking more royalties out of Germany than any other foreign author. In that year, however, a German published a book named "Tarzan the German Devourer." It appears this tract called attention to "Tarzan the Untamed"—a World War novel in which, according to Johnston, Burroughs had the titled ape-man "do his bit by capturing German officers and feeding them to the lions."

A reading of the Burroughs thriller reveals that Mr. Johnston wrote of the incident without making complete research. Tarzan did not capture German officers and feed them to the lions; he treated only one of them that way. He did, it is true, defeat a German army in Africa by means of a lion. Armed only with this rather untrustworthy weapon and the more reliable machine gun he had commandeered, he cleaned out an entire section of trenches. The feat was that of a brave man and hardly one which, in itself, could fail to draw applause from Germans. The Prussian sense of humor is far from impressive, but what there is of it runs largely to such practical jokes as Tarzan's.

There is a great deal in the "Untamed" story, however, to which a self-respecting Teuton might take exception. My brand-new copy bears 1920 copyright and 1922 publication dates. In those years the Germans had forgotten their private version of the White Man's Burden and were trying very hard to evolve an orderly state in the image of those which had just vanquished them. Yet they found themselves referred to by Mr. Burroughs consistently as Huns, and at that with bullet heads, heavy jowls and bull necks. As evidence of their cowardice, the world was informed that Hauptmann Schneider "vented his Prussian spleen upon the askaris nearest at hand, yet with greater circumspection, since these men bore loaded rifles."

Examples of brutality among his German characters are vividly described by Mr. Burroughs. Two native guides staggered along, fastened to each other by neck chains. They had been "impressed into the service of kultur and upon their poor, bruised bodies kultur's brand was revealed in divers cruel wounds and bruises. Thus, even in darkest Africa, was the light of German civilization commencing to reflect itself upon the undeserving natives just as at the same period, the fall of 1914, it was shedding its glorious effulgence on benighted Belgium." In regard to the wounds and bruises, Mr. Burroughs adds that "it was enough for Hauptmann Fritz Schneider to know that he was lost in the African wilderness and that he had at hand human beings less powerful than he who could be made to suffer torture."

Our author is either grossly unfair to the Germans or illogically partial to Tarzan, for that which he regards as bestiality in the one he relates as playfulness on the part of the other. Tarzan followed a mob of renegade German soldiers through the jungle, until "the last straggling warrior suggested to his mind the pleasures of blackbaiting—an amusement and a sport in which he had grown ever more proficient since that long-gone day when Kulunga, the son of Mbonga, had cast his unfortunate spear at Kala, the ape-man's foster mother."

Thus Tarzan had the motive of revenge, but it was a slender one, since these blacks could have had little connection with the regrettable Kulonga. The ape-man's sport took on a rather serious form, something like that of Mussolini's flier-son. From the comparative security of a tree he let down a noose by which he caused the unsuspecting renegade to disappear "as though by magic . . . amidst the leafy foliage above." Thereafter he impaled his playmate's head upon a stake and used it for a bogey to frighten the rest of the travelers.

Literal and logical, German readers must have found the story somewhat confused at this point. Tarzan's mission was to wipe out every German in Africa, because he supposed that Germans had burned his wife alive. In harrying the renegade blacks, who deserved Teuton punishment, he was in effect giving comfort to the enemy. His savagery seems even more unprincipled than Hauptmann Schneider's, and considerably more grim. The only conclusion is that the Germans' torturings were beastly because they were Germans, and Tarzan's were simply whimsical becaues he was Tarzan.

I do not mean to imply that the slightest blame attaches to Mr. Burroughs because in or about the time of the World War he wrote unbridled statements into a modern dime novel. Much sillier things were said under the guise of official information. My father, a Four Minute Man, was instructed to tell his audiences that Germans cut off little Belgian children's hands. He rebelled, but some other speakers may have acquiesced. I think the important aspect of the "Untamed" case is that Edgar Rice Burroughs, who knows unfailingly what the greatest number will read and writes exactly that, found it expedient to write then in the way he did. Much of what he said as fiction is being said again in deadly seriousness at this moment—and even forewarned, as you and I are, we are inclined to believe a lot of it is true.

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler

2 Per Cent Or Else

THE EVANSVILLE Press recently published an editorial revealing that the assistant chief of police had issued an order to members of the local force to pay up their assessments in the local Two Per Cent Club. Those who fail to kick in with their regular tribute to the local Democratic machine will forfeit their days off, which come at the rate of one a month.

"The Two Per Cent Club, alias the Vanderburg County Democratic Club," says the Press, "is an organization which forcibly collects from public employes funds to keep a faction of the local Democratic Party in power. We say forcibly because the most direct form of economic pressure is used. If you want to keep your job you pay. In these days when the loss of a job may bring tragic consequences it takes a brave man indeed to withstand such pressure. Policemen who receive $36.75 for a seven-day week don't have to pay the full 2 per cent. They are left off at $2 a month, $24 a year.

"The Two Per Cent Club idea was not born in Evansville. It was copied from the plan originated in Indiana by the State Democratic machine, which continues to collect from State employes a huge slush fund for campaign purposes. The Indiana plan, which never has had an adequate court test, operates under a law passed by an overwhelmingly Democratic Legislature."

Dips Into Public Money for Funds

WHAT THIS plan and the Louisiana plan, which is known as the de-ducks, amount to is political extortion, and the excuse offered for both of them that they relieve political parties of the temptation to go to big corporations for big party contributions doesn't remove the curse. Public servants work for the public and not for any party and draw their pay from the public, not from the party.

No Huey Long, Paul V. McNutt or county Democratic leader has any more right to extort political contributions from a Louisiana school teacher, an Indianapolis legislative clerk or an Evansville cop than the owner of a drugstore to hold back from his soda clerk a contribution to the Republican Party.

Under this system a citizen who is a Republican and a taxpayer is compelled to contribute, through his taxes, to the support of a party to which he is opposed, and the process of paying the money out to the employe as wages and taking it back in the form of a compulsory contribution is an evasion which doesn't deceive.

The result is that the party dips into public money for its funds, and the risk of electing to the Presidency a man who believes his national machine would then be entitled to 2 per cent of the entire pay roll of the United States Government, even though the armed forces be excepted, will be mentioned in connection with the ambitions of Mr. McNutt.

Extortion Plan Failed to Cure Evil

IN LOUISIANA it was shown that the extortion plan did not cure the evil which it was supposed to abolish. The racketeers in command of State politics there not only took down their percentage of the entire State pay roll and gave no intelligent accounting—an omission which suggests that hunks of money could have been stolen by individuals—but continued to bear down on the corporations.

Earl Long, when he took over from Dick Leche, announced that henceforth nobody would be compelled to subscribe to or buy advertising space in Leche's political newspaper. This paper had a custom of turning out gigantic souvenir editions celebrating various happy events in the careers of individual members of the machine.

And among the display advertisements were many taken in the name of contractors and dealers who had had the remarkable good fortune to participate in the construction of public works.

But, to return to the original idea, if public employes are overpaid the economy belongs to the taxpayers and the whole people, not to any political group. If they are paid just what they deserve, then the money should be their own to do with as they please, barring, of course, the legislative taxes to which all citizens are subject.

Under the Louisiana and Indiana plans and the system used by many labor unions there is a very practical admission that the individual's right to sell his ability and effort, keep his earnings and contribute only to purposes which he voluntarily approves is subject to curtailment by private organizations. If that contention is upheld we waive important rights of American citizenship and indorse one of the most dangerous features of fascism.

Turtle Not Slow In Courtship

Some Species Even Roar in Love Making, Author Points Out

By Lewis Gannett

THEY WERE here before the dinosaurs, and they still thrive. Individual turtles outlive the oldest of the human species. They grew bigger in prehistoric days, but some turtles probably grow to weigh a ton, even in this degenerate age. And they know how to use their weight. A 103-pound Mississippi Valley snapping turtle can walk around with a 165-pound man on his back, and still have spirit left for fighting.

These data are culled from Clifford Pope's "Turtles of the United States and Canada" (Knopf, $3.75) which looks like an academic treatise and is, in fact, a series of fascinating essays upon the strange and various habits of the hard-shelled reptiles. Mr. Pope seems to have kept most species of turtles (well, perhaps not "most"; we'll except the big marine turtles) as pets in his own office, up at the American Museum of Natural History, and he has pored over the records of observations upon turtles, at home or abroad, made by all the other turtle fanciers of the world. The result is a unique book which should start a national epidemic of turtle study.

For one of the most interesting aspects of turtles is that so little is known about them. Mr. Pope could dip up only one account of the courtship of the common mud turtle, and only one description of this turtle's egg laying. A popular superstition credits the common snapping turtle with moving upstream in spring, downstream in the autumn, but there are no scientific observations to support it. No one knows—at least no one has published—anything about the hibernation of the familiar little spotted turtle. Samen say that the big green sea turtles migrate hundreds of miles in the breeding season; Mr. Pope doubts it. There is reason to believe that baby turtles, just hatched, move toward the light. If they hatch at night, they start uphill, toward the sky; in daytime they move toward the bright patches of water. But the question requires further study, and what is true for one species of turtle is not necessarily true of another.

YOU MAY THINK that the courtship of turtles is dull business. There are species which roar in their love making. Turtles are not all silent; the bellow of their leatherneck may be heard a quarter mile away, while the whistle of the wood turtle is a subtle sound. The pretty little Troost's turtle, which is the favorite of the petshops, indulges in a curious ritual in the course of which the male vibrates his long finger nails against the chin of the female, until the lady is properly hypnotized. All through this performance the male turtle swims gently backward and forward; it is something for Billy Rose of the Aquacade to look into.

Turtles, Mr. Pope insists, are bright. They learn rapidly to find their way through a maze; they have a keen sense of direction—as John Steinbeck pointed out in that memorable passage in "Grapes of Wrath," and they can be taught to come at regular hours for their meals. Not all turtles, however, seem even to chelonophilic Mr. Pope to make good pets. He had a gopher turtle in his home for a time, but gave it up; it was less than 12 inches long, but, he complains, it proved to be a first-class furniture mover. This particular species is said to be able to carry a weight of 600 pounds on his back.

The gopher turtle is the familiar burrowing turtle of the Southeastern states. It has been known to dig a hole in the ground 25 feet long, reaching a depth of 11 feet beneath the surface. The desert turtle of the West is another able excavator, but it has not been known to conduct such extensive mining operations, which is strange, since the supposed purpose of this burrowing is to reach moist earth, and the desert turtles live in a superdry country.

This desert turtle is better adapted to desert life than is the proverbial camel. In a single long drink one of these animals will swallow enough water to increase its weight by 40 per cent, which is, Mr. Pope points out, equivalent to a man getting 10 gallons of water down at a time. But the desert turtle, again contrary to common belief, does not travel far in search of water. It just sits and waits; if it cannot get water once or twice a year, it can obsorb it from its food. As far as records go, these reptiles do not move more than a few hundred yards in a year.

SOME TURTLES are far less sluggish. The ornate box turtle, which is so superabundant in parts of Kansas and Oklahoma, will actually leap off the ground in pursuit of a grasshopper, and can move faster than the agile lizard. And no human eye is quick enough to follow the quick thrust of a snapping turtle's powerful beak.

Snapping turtles, Mr. Pope says, are mean-tempered and aggressive on land, but positively amiable in the water. This allegation raises a question which has been hotly debated this summer in Litchfield County, Conn. A distinguished official of the State claims that a snapping turtle bit off, under water, a wart which had bothered him for years. Cynics doubt the story, and Mr. Pope's evidence will go far to reinforce their skepticism. But there are others who hold that New England college presidents never lie, and Mr. Pope himself admits that there is much to be learned about turtles.

Turtles, indeed, may be a man's lifework. Mr. Pope tell only a little about the studies of his colleague, Mr. John T. Nichols, who seems to have devoted his spare time for 20 years to the box turtles of Long Island. He has captured and marked more than three score of the species, and recaptured them after lapes of from 1 to 15 years.

Heat Worse Than in Brazil, Say 8 Here to Study Government

6 Men and 2 Women, Experts in Their Country, Find Washington 'Beautiful, but Too Hot' as They Brush Up on English

Eight youthful Brazilian government employes were in Washington yesterday, assigned for one year to become students of American government.

The group, six men and two women, experts in their fields, were selected from the Brazilian Civil Service, the D. A. S. P., by nomination of high government officials, granted leave of absence with pay for a year, and sent to Washington under the guidance of Mario Paulo de Brito, a director of the D. A. S. P. and professor at the University of Brazil.

Yesterday, a week after their arrival in Washington, the students were busy brushing up their English, in preparation for studies at the American University School of Public Affairs next month and for their "laboratory work" at the Civil Service Commission and Governmental departments. For an hour they took time away from lessons to try out their English in their first group press conference here.

"Beautiful, But Too Hot"

Their English, punctuated with Latin gestures and quick conferences in Portugese, was used with equal efficiency to describe their pleasure at being in Washington, and the serious purpose of their visit here.

With one flashing gesture and a large smile, Prof. de Brito gave his reaction to Washington, "Beautiful, but too hot."

He said the heat here is worse than Brazil.

Declaring that his country is intensely interested in improving the organization of the Brazilian public service, Prof. de Brito said:

"That is the reason we are here. We hope to return to our country next July better prepared to carry on our work."

Senorita Beatris Marques de Sousa, a striking brunette who is an expert accountant, said she planned to study personnel organization. Senorita Ana Maria de Cerqueira Lima, secretary to the president of the D. A. S. P., will take a secretarial course along with work for the Civil Service Commission.

Augusto de Bulhoes, a lawyer, will specialize in personnel administration, while Joaquim R. R. Julee, jr., an engineer, will study personnel selection.

Dr. Ary de Castro Fernandes plans to work on labor, population and other social statistics. With him in Washington, although not a member of the student group, is his wife, Maria Joanna Fernandes.

Group Third Largest

Others in the group are Christiano Teixeira Lobas, accompanied by his wife, Celina Lobas; Eduardo Lopez Rodrigues, and Galileo Antenor de Aranjo.

Dr. J. C. Patterson, director of the school, said the Brazilian group was the third largest that has studied here under the "Hall of Nations" program, supported in part by a grant from the Rockefeller Foundation.

Council Suspends Printers' Union From the A. F. of L.

Atlantic City, N. J., Aug. 18 (AP).—William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, announced tonight that the A. F. of L.'s executive council had declared the International Typographical Union "automatically suspended" for nonpayment of a special assessment.

Green said the I. T. U. could obtain automatic reinstatement by paying an assessment of 1 cent a member per month which was levied in 1937 for an organization fund at the height of rivalry between the A. F. of L. and the Committee for Industrial Organization.

Unless the payment is made, Green said, the I. T. U. will be denied seats at the A. F. of L.'s national convention opening in Cincinnati October 4.

U. S. and Canada Make Civil Flying Treaty Effective

The State Department last night announced completion of a civil aviation agreement between the United States and Canada permitting licensed commercial planes of the two nations to fly over each other's territory and providing for mutual use of their respective airports.

The arrangement, an outgrowth of the United States-Canada civil aviation conference last week, became effective yesterday.

Under the pact, each nation agrees to grant bona fide Canadian or American air carriers permits for non-stop services through the air space over its territory between two points within the territory of the other. A special provision calls for a separate understanding on inland non-stop services between the United States and Alaska.

Flea Could Wreck Hawaii Gibraltar By Bubonic Plague

Honolulu, Aug. 18 (AP).—Dr. James H. Enright, territorial health commissioner's assistant, said today Oahu Island, the most strongly fortified rock in the world, has one vulnerable approach. Through it, a disease-bearing flea may enter.

This flea, xenopsylla cheopis, is the carrier of bubonic plague. The insect is carrie dby rats. A constant threat of bubonic plague confronts Honolulu and Oahu fortifications. Two of the five principal islands of Hawaii have the plague.

The health officer asserted that if the plague ever invaded the islands as it did at the turn of the century, Pearl Harbor, the Navy's great mid-Pacific base; Hickham Field, center of Army Air Corps operations, and all forts, would be "useless."

Altering History

Mere Suggestions

WHEREAS, Thanksgiving now comes too close to Christmas, to the disadvantage of retail trade, therefore be it decreed that Thanksgiving is hereby set back one week, from the last Thursday in November, to the next to the last.

Whereas, Christmas now comes too close to New Year's Day, therefore be it hereby decreed that Christmas be advanced to the first day of February.

Whereas, Lincoln's Birthday, February 12, comes too close to Washington's Birthday, February 22, and whereas, both will now come too close to the date of Christmas, herein established as February 1, therefore be it decreed: (A) That Lincoln's Birthday is hereby changed to June 1; and that (B) Washington's Birthday is hereby abolished. For whereas George Washington lived in horse and buggy days, it necessarily follows that the principles and sentiments associated with him are now obsolete, inappropriate and confusing, especially to the correct functioning of courts, and the orderly conduct of the Government.

Whereas, for the same reasons hereinbefore given for abolishing Washington's Birthday, it is equally clear that the golden eagle as the symbol of the United States is likewise obsolete and outmoded, therefore be it hereby decreed from the date of this proclamation the symbol of the United States shall be the Blue Eagle. And it is hereby ordered that the necesary changes be made in the Great Seal of the United States, upon all coins of the United States, and upon all military insignia.

Whereas, it is desirable that there should be a national holiday to celebrate and appropriately honor the new dispensation now extant and official in the United States, having to do with society, economy and government, and currently known as the New Deal, therefore be it decreed that such new holiday is hereby established. The date thereof shall be April 1.

Might As Well Regulate Tides

WHEREAS, the sailing and arrival of ships is delayed and inconvenienced by the unnecessary frequency of tides, to wit, twice daily; therefore be it hereby decreed that there shall henceforth be one tide each week. And it is likewise hereby decreed that the low tide shall take place on Saturday night, and that the high tide shall take place on Monday morning.

Whereas, much time is needlessly lost by our citizens, and such difficulty encountered, by multiplying by 3.1416; therefore be it hereby decreed that on and after the date of this proclamation, the circumference of the circle shall be three times its diameter, and no longer 3.1416.

Whereas, it has been heretofore commonly asserted and assumed in books of arithmetic, as well as in banks and other commercial institutions, and in private computations, that two plus two equals four; and whereas this assumption leads to a rigidity which frequently frustrates the flexibility that is imperatively demanded by modern conditions; therefore, be it hereby decreed that the sum of two and two shall henceforth be such figure as the administrative authority of the United States shall from time to time declare it to be. And it is hereby ordered that there shall be issued twice daily, from the Department of Agriculture, coincident with the issue of the weather reports, whatever figure is to be for each half-daily period the sum of two plus two. The figure thus fixed shall be duly observed by all courts, and shall be binding upon all contracts, especially contracts between the Government of the United States and citizens thereof.

Should Substitute Spending for Saving

WHEREAS, in divers books, maxims and common sayings it is asserted that thrift is a virtue, of which an example is, "A penny saved is a penny earned;" and whereas this leads to misunderstanding of important public policies now current; therefore be it decreed that in such books, maxims and common sayings, the word "saving" shall be removed, and there shall be substituted therefore the word "spending," to the end that it shall hereafter be understood that spending is a virtue.

Whereas, there has heretofore been in common use a phrase reading "Government spending," and whereas this phrase has been made especially conspicuous by the frequent use of it by the successful candidate for President of the United States in 1932; and whereas this phrase leads to misunderstanding of, and impediment to, important public policies; and whereas this misunderstanding has recently led Congress to fail to pass needed legislation; therefore be it hereby decreed that in such phrase the world "spending" be removed, and that in place of it there be substituted the word "investing," so that such phrase shall read, "Government investing."

The decrees herein set forth shall be duly entered upon the statute books of the United States as perfecting amendments and amplifications, supplementing and carrying out the statute heretofore enacted and proclaimed on January 31, 1934, and now five years in effect, to wit, the statute which decrees that a dollar shall no longer consist of 25.8 grains of gold, but shall hereafter consist of 15.2 grains.

Dangerous Illusion

Hitler And The British Mind

GERMANS, as a people, have never been noted for their understanding of the psychology of non-Germans. That has been particularly true of most of their statesmen.

This blind spot has cost Germany dear. It was in no small measure responsible for the trend of events in the years following the moment when William II dismissed Bismarck and took the direction of the Reich's foreign policy in his own hands. The same fault may lead to disaster now.

One of the contributory causes of the present grave crisis in Europe is undoubtedly the belief which many Nazis share, among them, it is believed, both Hitler and Ribbentrop, that Great Britain is bluffing, that when the test comes she will give way as she did last year and, to avoid going to war, will abandon Poland as she abandoned Czecho-Slovakia.

THE REASONING back of this belief is logical. The same men are in power in England today who were in power a year ago. The premier is the very man who three times flew to Germany to plead with the Fuehrer to keep the peace. And if Czecho-Slovakia was not worth fighting for, why, it is argued in Berlin, should Poland be worth it?

But the trouble with that theory is precisely that it is logical. It ignores the imponderables of the European situation. Above all, it ignores the psychology of the British.

THE KAISER made the same mistake 25 years ago. There is a remarkable document from his pen to be found in Germany's prewar archives. It is a marginal note he wrote on a dispatch informing the foreign office that Russia was determined to carry out its mobilization against Austria-Hungary, a development which the Kaiser correctly understood as a war move. But his fury was not directed against the Czar so much as against the British. And in this marginal note he pours the vials of his wrath against the London government and its leaders, past and present.

"The net," he wrote, "has been suddenly thrown over our head and England sneeringly reaps the most brilliant success of her persistently prosecuted, purely anti-German world policy against which we have found ourselves helpless while she twists the noose of our political and economic destruction."

He went on to say that, "there have been people who believed that England could be won over or pacified by this or that puny measure! Unremittingly, relentlessly, she has pursued her object with us under the hypocritical cloak of justice . . ." And he cited all the measures of appeasement—to use a current term—which Great Britain had used to, as he saw it, throw dust into Germany's eyes.

IN OTHER WORDS, the very efforts which Great Britain had made in the years before 1914 to prevent the World War from taking place had persuaded the Kaiser that when the test came Great Britain would not fight.

By the same token it may be that Hitler assumes that the basis of the Chamberlain government's appeasement policy was cowardice and that this state of mind holds true for Britain today as yesterday.

If that is what the Fuehrer believes he may, too late (as did the Kaiser), discover that he has been hugging an illusion.

PACIFISM, which is far different from cowardice, undoubtedly played a great role in British policy during these last years. But it was not the sole determining factor. There was also the fact that until Munich Great Britain suffered from a guilty conscience.

A large number of people in Great Britain have for years taken the position that the Treaty of Versailles was an unjust and vicious document and that Germany had not been properly treated after the war. No matter that the debt of repentance they owed the Reich was to be paid not to the Weimar republic but to the Germany of Adolf Hitler. They felt that the payment should be made anyway. By no means all sections of British opinion believed that. But enough of them did to provide psychological support for the Chamberlain policy.

WITH MUNICH, however, the British conscience was mollified. The Versailles Treaty debt had been paid. And many Englishmen assumed, if quite naively, that now that the worst mistakes of the peace had been rectified, no matter in what fashion or at what price, the basis of a new European order could be laid. Neville Chamberlain certainly thought so or he would not have declared, on returning from Munich, that he thought it was "peace for our time."

The conduct of the Nazi regime after Munich opened the eyes of those in Great Britain whose eyes had been closed to the realities of Hitler's policy. The pogroms of November, 1938, were a rude awakening and the destruction of what had been left of Czecho-Slovakia provided an even greater shock to British sensibilities.

GREAT BRITAIN no longer suffers from a bad conscience. The evils of Versailles have been wiped clean. It is now no longer a question of rectifying a wrong done to Germany by Great Britain and her wartime allies. It is now a question of whether one nation is to be permitted to dominate the continent. That is why there is today so little suggestion of weakness or appeasement visible in London.

But whether Hitler understands the change that has come over British opinion and British policy is anything but certain. It is this circumstance which makes the present European situation so full of foreboding. For if Hitler does not understand this change he may continue along his present course to the point where retreat becomes impossible and the world is plunged into a disaster which the people of no nation want.

Ickes Eyes Rising Gasoline Price

parity between total supply and consumptive demand, the prohibition against interstate shipment could be made inoperative during the period of shortage," Ickes said.

He added there were very large stocks of crude petroleum and gasoline impounded in the various States which could be drawn upon should the Connally act provisions be lifted, assuring an adequate supply for the consuming public.

Oil men watched the rise in gasoline prices closely. Many believed it held a key to the 20-cent slash in crude prices which precipitated the shutdown of wells in Oklahoma, Texas, Kansas, Louisiana, New Mexico and Arkansas.

The reduction in crude prices first was ordered by Sinclair Prairie Oil Marketing Co. Sinclair interests had asserted the price of gasoline must go up or the price of crude slump. Efforts of Sinclair to boost gasoline prices were not generally successful.

Michigan gave some support to the shutdown States and announced a temporary reduction in withdrawal limits from wells which will cut the State's production about 15,000 barrels daily, not quite a fourth of its present output.

Meanwhile, a blow to the shutdown order in Arkansas came late in the day as Chancellor W. A. Speer enjoined the Arkansas State police force from keeping closed 52 Jones sand wells of the Lion Oil Refining Co. in nearby Shuler Field.

The El Dorado court sustained a petition attacking the use of the police force as an enforcement agency for the State Oil and Gas Commission's State-wide petroleum shutdown order.

The police put padlocks on Lion wells last night after the company refused to obey the shutdown edict.

Speer stipulated, however, today's ruling in no way would affect a further hearing, scheduled next Monday on another suit brought by Lion, challenging validity of the shutdown order itself.

Sinclair-Prairie Co. officials still declined to discuss the action of the company in suddenly abolishing its posted purchase price for crude.

However, Gov. Phillips of Oklahoma asserted "now it won't be so embarrassing when they came up with a fair price."

will be in dire need of assistance."

Another hardship, less acute but of potential danger, is the necessity of leaving open cuts in streets which have been opened for utility changes—sewers, water, electricity, etc. Fire Chief Stephen T. Porter last night admitted that these presented a hazard to fire protection but expressed confidence that measures being taken to solve this problem were adequate.

Hardest hit of the District PWA projects are the Municipal Center foundation work and the three Rock Creek sewer diversion contracts. At District Building headquarters it was said 400 men are idle on these jobs alone.

Less seriously affected were said to be the medical and tuberculosis buildings under construction at Gallinger Hospital, the District Jail addition, new school buildings and the new Juvenile Court Building.

"Considerable Accomplished"

Representatives of Sand and Gravel Workers Union, Local No. 22075, and of the Smoot company joined Conciliator Colvin in declaring yesterday's conference to be friendly and satisfactory, though it produced no agreement.

"Considerable has been accomplished," they said.

However, their optimism was not so reassuring to contractors, home builders, Government officials and others. The Smoot Sand and Gravel Co., whose dredging operations extend from Georgetown to below Alexandria, supplies most of the building sand used in Washington.

A Smoot official said dredging has ceased and only a few small deliveries were made yesterday from the plant's dwindling piles of sand and gravel.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

"Where are you going?"

"Out to play 18 holes of golf."

"Don't be silly. You can't do it."

"Why not?"

"President Roosevelt has just issued a ruling that 14 holes shall constitute the orthodox round."

"He can't do that to me."

"My eye he can't! And it helps business, anyhow."

"How so?"

"It gives the golfers a chance to buy a second cup of coffee before dashing out on the course."

"Dammit, it makes me so sore I don't feel like playing today. I'll put it off until next Tuesday."

"You can't do that. Next Tuesday will really be this week, Friday. Hadn't you heard?"

"No."

"You'd better keep in touch with the news from Washington and Campobello."

"Let's take an auto ride."

"Okay, but, please remember to keep on the wrong side of the road."

"Wrong side of the road!"

"Of course. It's orders."

"What are you talking about?"

"Don't you ever read the papers? The President issued a proclamation this morning, abolishing the old custom of keeping to the right as too traditional. From now on all drivers must keep to the left."

"I suppose that's to help business, too."

"Of course. It will give the towcar and wreckage clearing companies more than they can handle."

"Let's take a sea trip and get away from it all."

"Oh, a southern cruise, perhaps."

"No dice. Word came from some Federal bureau today that only northern cruises will be acceptable as in accord with the American spirit from now on. Ickes says we should all go to Alaska. It's full of opportunities."

"What's this mess on your writing table?"

"That's a letter I'm writing to mother."

"But it looks so funny."

"What are you writing your mother for?"

"Her birthday comes on Labor Day and I'm asking what she wants for Christmas?"

"If her birthday comes on Labor day you give her her present on Labor Day, not Christmas."

Who Can Tell?

George van Slyke thinks the next move may be a proclamation outlawing the turkey and substituting the cornfed frankfurter.

to run a happy home for her husband, Doak P. Phythian, former president of the painters' union, is not particularly interested in ratiocination. She cares neither for mystery stories nor crime movies.

"I leave all the important work of studying criminal records and methods to the men who are especially equipped for it," says Mrs. Pythian. "I depend mainly on my intuition and the impression a face or personality leaves on me."

For nine years she has operated in District department stores against shoplifters. She doesn't carry firearms, and she doesn't blow a whistle or cream when she sees someone stealing.

She merely walks up to the shoplifter, quietly says, "You're under arrest," and signals a store official.

Crminals apparently have been so surprised at being accused by one who appears to be an attractive housewife downtown for a day of shopping that Mrs. Phythian never has had a physical struggle with one in her 13 years of service.

And she doesn't like to call shoplifters criminals.

"We get all kinds of people," she said. "There are neurotic kleptomaniacs, children who have never been told better, an occasional regular offender, sometimes mature women who should know better but have itching fingers. Kleptomaniacs can be cured. Habitual offenders are turned over by the police to a psychiatrist in the District social service department."

But don't think that so much charm couldn't take care of itself if a crisis arose. Let Mrs. Phythian try her pet jiu jitsu hold.

Germany as a Briton Sees It

What is Germany actually like, behind the propaganda? How popular is the Nazi regime? What about German labor? Is food really scarce? These, and other questions about the Reich are answered by H. P. S. Matthews, of the Royal Institute of International Affairs, in a series of three articles, to appear in The Washington Post, starting Monday. These articles are objective, dispassionate, informative. You will enjoy reading them.

Society Notables Mostly Out of Town

British Ambassador Will Be Back First of Week; Italian Envoy Returns to Resort in Virginia

If all the members of Capital society who are left in town got together this week-end, there still wouldn't be enough for even a small-sized cocktail party. Even hardworking Government officials and diplomats who have been staying here through all the heat and humidity are breaking away from their cluttered desks for today and tomorrow, anyway.

The British Ambassador, Sir Ronald Lindsay, is off in search of coolth, but will be back the first of the week. It is reported that Lord Lothian, who will succeed him as envoy here, will sail for this country in the near future, and the embassy, it is said, will shortly issue a statement as to his plans.

After his weekly summer stint at the chancery, the Italian Ambassador, Prince Colonna, has returned to Hot Springs. He is dividing his time between the Virginia mountain resort and the Capital, returning there the middle of each week in time for the arrival of the diplomatic pouch.

The Chilean Ambassador and Senora de Cabero frequently entertain guests over the week-end at their summer cottage in nearby Sherwood Forest, and expect that several will drop in on them today and tomorrow. They are expected to transfer their headquarters back to the embassy here by about the middle of September.

Southampton Enjoys Gay Season

Southampton, which, with Newport, enjoys the reputation of being America's smartest summer resort, is playing host to many from Washington this summer. There this week-end are Mr. and Mrs. Lee P. Warren, who will visit Mr. and Mrs. Dwight F. Davis at Bayberry Land. Mr. and Mrs. Warren usually pass the warm months at Hot Springs or Narragansett, but this season they have been, for the most part, at their camp in Virginia.

Mrs. Davis served as chairman of the committee in charge of the very successful auction sale held earlier in the week in Southampton for the benefit of the Southampton Hospital. Prior to the sale Mrs. Davis was entertained at luncheon by Mrs. Roger Tuckerman, who is a sister of Mrs. Jerauld Wright, of Washington and Annapolis.

The decision of Mr. and Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman to occupy Dormie, their summer home at the Long Island resort, for the first time in many seasons, has added to the pleasure of several of their Washington friends who have been visiting them in a steady stream. Miss Elsie Ekengren, of this city, is now a member of the perpetual Tuckerman houseparty.

The Newport season (incidentally, the sacred sands of exclusive Bailey's Beach, have at last been opened to candid camera photographers) will reach a climax with tennis week. Miss Vivien Stokes, daughter of Mrs. Henry Drummond-Wolff, of London, has arrived for the matches and attendant festivities and is stopping at Tudor Hall. She is the daughter of Sylvanus Stokes, of Annapolis, and a younger sister of the glamorous Miss Marsyl Stokes, who has spent part of the last two winters here. The latter stayed originally with her late grandmother, Mrs. Gibson Fahnestock, but since her death nearly two years ago has put up with her godmother, Mrs. Eldridge Jordan. Mrs. Drummond-Wolff has remained in London this summer.

Also a recent addition to the late summer colony at Newport is Mrs. Snowden Fahnestock, who has returned there after visiting in Colorado Springs for several weeks. She and her husband are occupying their home, Ker Arvor.

Palm Beach Club Attracts Many

Several fashionables who usually avoid hot cities in the summer drifted back to New York for the opening on the World's Fair Grounds the other evening of the Palm Beach Club. The opening has been postponed many times, but was very gala when finally it got under way. Among those present were Mr. and Mrs. "Jock" McLean, who were accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Edward McIlvaine and Mr. and Mrs. Edward Reeves, all of whom frequently visit the Capital.

Backers of the smart new club are Crawford Hill, William Rhinelander Stewart, whose wife, the former Janet Newbold, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fleming Newbold, of Washington; Oliver Rodgers and Ladie Mackintosh. Mrs. Hill and Mrs. Rodgers came down from Newport to be present at the opening.

The McDonalds On Bridal Trip

Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Frederick McDonald are en route to California following their wedding here on Wednesday morning at 10 o'clock in Blessed Sacrament Church with the Rev. Thomas Smyth officiating. Upon their return they will make their home at 2138 F street northwest.

The bride is the former Miss Carmen A. Montes, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Manuel B. Montes. Mr. McDonald is the son of Mrs. Lydia McDonald.

Wearing a white net and lace gown, the bride was given in marriage by her father. The gown ended in a long sweeping train, and her tulle veil was held in place by a cluster of orange blossoms. She carried a bouquet of gardenias and lilies of the valley.

Mrs. Mortimer Naff, jr., sister of the bride, attended as matron of honor. She wore a blue marquisette frock with ruffles about the bottom. She carried a bouquet of roses and delphinia.

Miss Gloria Montes and Miss Jeannette Montes, both sisters of the bride, attended as bridesmaids. Gloria wore a blue net frock, while Jeannette was gowned in peach net. They carried roses and delphinia.

Herschel H. Johnson was best man, and ushers were Robert L. Johnson and Lester H. Wallace.

A reception was held after the ceremony at the home of the bride's parents, on Utah avenue. Mrs. Montes wore a wine-red chiffon frock for the ocasions and white accessories.

Among the out-of-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. Mortimer Naff, of Deland, Fla.; Mr. and Mrs. John A. Flannery, of Monocacy, Pa., and Mrs. Sally Flannery, of Monocacy, Pa.

Both Mr. and Mrs. McDonald attended the Washington College of Law.

Ansel Talbert Ends Visit Here With His Parents

Ansel E. Talbert, aviaton editor of the New York Herald Tribune, has returned to New York after a brief visit with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Talbert, of Washington.

After a flight through Europe to obtain the latest European flying information, Mr. Talbert returned to the United States on the Atlantic Clipper. While abroad he interviewed Mussolini and was one of several aviation editors to be entertained by the Duke and Duchess of Windsor.

Mrs. Lillian Griffith Fetes Committee

Mrs. Lillian M. Griffith entertained members of the ladies reception committee for the eighteenth biennial convention of the Order of Alhambra on Thursday evening at the Willard. The convention will be held at the Willard August 31, September 1 and September 2.

Final details are being completed for a luncheon, shopping tours, and other events in honor of the ladies who will attend the convention.

Visiting Cape Cod

Miss Susan B. Kinter and Miss Harriet Whitford are visiting Mrs. Starr Hyde Eaton at her summer home on Cape Cod.

Panhellenic Group Feted

Mrs. Vashti Burr Whittington, president of the Women's Professional Panhellenic Association, entertained a group of the officers and fraternity members last evening at her home, 4700 Connecticut avenue. Assisting her were the Misses C. Virginia Diedel, Catherine L. Vaux, Tracy Strohecker and Kay Shilling.

At the party, it was announced that the biennial convention of W. P. P. A. would be held in Washington October 27-29 at the Wardman Park Hotel. Hostesses for the convention will be the Washington active and alumnae chapters of Sigma Sigma Sigma, Kappa Beta Pi, Phi Delta Delta, and the Washington alumnae chapters of Sigma Alpha Iota and Phi Chi Theta. Convention committee chairmen were appointed by the officers present from the membership of the hostess chapters.

The Women's Professional Panhellenic Association is composed of women's national business and professional fraternities, including music, physical education, law, home economics, commerce, education and speech arts groups. It was organized in Washington in July, 1925, by a committee of which Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt was in charge. The coming convention will be the first held in Washington since its organization.

Among Mrs. Whittington's guests last night were Miss Corinne L. Quarles, Miss Elizabeth F. Reed, Mrs. Grace B. Stiles, Mrs. Anna L. Moulton, Miss Marguerite Rawalt, Miss Catherine L. Anne Leonard, A. J. Hartnett Wed at Chicago

Of interest to Washington is the announcement of the marriage of Miss Anne Leonard and Arthur John Harnett Wednesday at Chicago.

The bride, a former resident of Ithaca, N. Y., and graduate of Cornell University, has made her home in Washington for a number of years.

Mr. Harnett was at one time the manager of the Mayflower Hotel here and is a former president of the Hotel Association of Washington.

Mr. and Mrs. Harnett will leave shortly for a trip to England and France.

The Hunt Country

By Nina Carter Tabb

Daniel C. Sands to Begin Cub-Hunting At End of Month

DANIEL C. SANDS, M. F. H. of the Middleburg Hunt, has gone to Cooperstown, N. Y., to visit F. Ambrose Clark, prominent in hunting circles. They will spend the week-end at Saratoga and attend the races there today.

Mr. Sands will begin cub-hunting the end of the month, upon his return here. He has already had the puppies out several times, and reports that they gave "good tongue" on the mountains.

Mrs. Louis E. Jeffries, jr., of Washington, is spending the week-end at the home of Mrs. John Keith on Winchester street, Warrenton. Mrs. Jeffries will visit friends in Middleburg next week before returning to her Washington apartment.

Mrs. Henry Cravites and her two young daughters, Frederica and Marguerite, of New Orleans, are visiting her mother, Mrs. Gasquet di Zerega, at her home near Aldie. Mrs. Cravites, the former Miss Frederica di Zerega, has many friends in Virginia.

MAJ. HARRY F. BAILEY and Capt. Benjamin Franklin Charles were guests of honor at a delightful party given by their brother officers of the 103d Medical Regiment, which is from Pennsylvania, on Thursday evening, at camp near Manassas. Maj. Bailey and Capt. Charles are retiring from the service, and the captain, in a speech during the evening, said that he was "glad that his retirement, sad as it was took place in Virginia, amid charming surroundings."

A platform on the grounds was gaily lit, and the regimental band gave a concert from 8 until 10. Guests sat in chairs and on benches ranged in front of the tent of Col. Charles P. Stahr, commanding officer of the regiment, while hundreds of officers and men sat on the grass around the band stand listening to the music. Everybody joined in when an old favorite was played.

AFTERWARDS the guests adjourned to a long tent for refreshments, and then returned to the platform for dancing to the music of colored musicians.

Hosts included Lieut. Col. Charles S. Hendricks, chairman of the committee on arrangements; Maj. J. D. Boyer, Maj. J. B. Doane, Maj. C. B. Dougherty, Capt. R. H. Iland, Capt. T. B. Bailey, Maj. C. D. Duttenhofer, Capt. Rodman Miller, Capt. James Z. Appel, Capt. R. E. Douds and Capt. Harold Hogg.

The guests, many of whom were called for in Army station wagons, included Dr. and Mrs. Stewart McBryde, Dr. and Mrs. H. E. Pickrel, Judge and Mrs. William Hill Brown, Mr. and Mrs. Jackson Ratcliffe, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Merchant, Mrs. Mary Lipscomb Jamison, Mrs. Jane Foster Palmer, Mrs. Ayleene Guthrie, Mrs. James Calvert, Miss Rose Ratcliffe, Miss Elvere Conner, Miss Walser Conner, Miss Catherine Pattie, Miss Gertrude Robertson, Miss Virginia Calvert, Miss Wallace Tiffany, Karl Kincheloe, E. R. Conner, Billy Jamison and Carter Foster.

Mrs. L. E. Jeffries, Jr., Will Be Guest of Mrs. John Keith

MAJ. C. B. DOUGHERTY, of the 103d Medical Regiment, is keen about fox hunting and is prime mover in a new activity—the Pulpit Rock Hunt—at Birmingham, Pa. The hunt was started last season with Thomas Grier as master.

Next season Capt. Charles W. Roberts will be joint master, with Mr. Grier; Maj. Dougherty and Miss Joyce Towne as whippers-in, and Miss Frances Crouse, a frequent visitor with the Virginia packs, as huntsman.

The Pulpit Rock Hunt has 17 English hounds, which were given them by Richard K. Mellon, M. F. H., of Rolling Rock Hunt, Pa. Mr. Mellon is very interested in the new hunt and gives the members every assistance in their venture. Maj. Dougherty says they will begin cubbing soon after he returns from Manassas, where he has been at maneuvers for the last two weeks.

When Mother Is Unaware of Daughter's Unmoral Conduct, What Is Informed Neighbor's Ethical Duty?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a married woman and a mother, living near a nice woman who has a teen-age daughter. Recently, while visiting another neighbor who lives across the street, I was asked if I knew that the girl was having affairs with boys. I was shocked and incredulous. I could not believe it of this girl, whom I have known since her childhood. I was told that the occupant of another apartment, in clear view of this girl's living room windows, had been an eye-witness of unmoral conduct.

When I protested the charge, I was told that I could see for myself, as I live next door and could easily check. I followed this suggestion and learned that what the neighbor had said was true. The mother of the girl leaves her alone on certain evenings to entertain her friends, and she is often alone with one boy for a while until her other friends come in. I realize the mother is at fault in leaving her alone, even with a group, and I have told her so. But she trusts her daughter completely.

Now, this is my question: Is there anything I should do? What if she should become pregnant, as many girls do? I have thought of having a talk with her. But I hesitate, as I do not want to cause trouble. She might leave home, or even commit suicide, thus making matters worse. I would hate to tell her mother, as I believe it would almost kill her. Yet I hate to stand by without lifting a hand, while gossip spreads through the neighborhood. The mother works and doesn't know her neighbors, so it will be a long time before she hears the gossip.

Now, Miss Haworth, if you tell me I should forget the whole affair, I will try to do so, but it has been causing me considerable worry and loss of rest. I will greatly appreciate an early reply. Yours truly, CONSCIENTIOUS.

Conscience Should Guide

DEAR CONSCIENTIOUS: It seems to me that the quality of your interest in the situation would constitute the most nearly infallible guide as to what is best to do. If your concern for the girl's truly maternal—sincerely protective and genuinely solicitous of her social and moral welfare—it seems to me your first instinctive reaction would have been to spring to her defense by (a) silencing her calumniators through roundly denouncing their keyhole-peeping as an offense against decency quite as outrageous as any of the girl's alleged sins of commission; and (b) by immediately making friends with the girl, to the end that you might bring some constructive influence to bear upon her actions.

The fact that you have not been above a bit of keyhole peeping yourself, and that you have (so I gather) promulgated scurrilous rumor by taking an active part in the neighborhood behind-the-hand exchange of notes, causes me to wonder if your interest in the situation is not at least as salacious as salutary.

Let us approach the problem from this angle: Suppose this girl was your daughter. Suppose one morally trustworthy neighbor was aware of her pitiful indiscretions, whereas you, her mother, were not. What would you like that neighbor to do? You may say, off-hand, that you would like her to tell you the truth. But would you? Frankly, I don't know. I only know that if you will hold fast to this view of the situation, you will be better able to discharge your moral obligation, if any, in the matter.

Confronted by such a spectacle of tragically blundering youth, the psychologically mature person of gentle sensibilities would shrink from playing the fool rushing in where angels might fear to tread. However, if his knowledge of the situation carried with it an inescapable sense of responsibility to lend a hand to the erring youngster, he might possibly address himself directly to the latter. He might speak to him at once as a friend and a disinterested spokesman for Society.

First, of course, he would need to have given down-to-earth demonstrations of friendship. In this case, for instance, you might make the initial overture of taking the girl a home made cake, or cookies or doughnuts or candy, expressing the hope that these might make a "hit" with her company. You might ask her to stop in of afternoons, if she is lonely or at loose ends before her mother gets home. If your interest was genuine and kindly, she would immediately sense that fact, and sooner or later you could promote the opening for a positively helpful talk.

You might tell her then that you have wanted to be her friend because she seemed to need one so badly; that you were much concerned for her, in view of the fact that she had become the butt of extremely critical and potentially damaging comment in the neighborhood. Without making specific accusations or naming any names, you might convey the idea that her indiscretions are becoming an open secret.

You might suggest that if she is, at heart, the wholesome girl that you, who have known her most of her life, believe her to be, she will bring herself up short and ask herself where she is drifting. You might say that you believe you are old enough and wise enough and trustworthy enough to be able, perhaps, to help her in analyzing and overcoming her difficulties.

Naturally, I cannot outline the form and content of such a talk in its entirety. Nor would I care to assume responsibility, even for advocating such a talk. But what I mean to say is this: If your conscience will not rest until you have "lifted a hand" in an effort to save the girl from possible catastrophe or ostracism, you can only employ some such approach as this. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Today's Health Talk

Excess Sun Exposure May Be Part Cause Of Dry Scalp

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

INQUIRIES come to this department concerning dry scalp more often in the summer than in the winter. Since there is no other special condition for this, I am inclined to believe that some of these cases are due to too much sun exposure.

"Dry scalp," as you hear the complaint from the victim, usually means itchy scalp with scales. The word "dry is a misnomer because the scales, or crusts, are fatty. The technical term for dry scalp is seborrhea, which means secretion of sebum, or skin fat.

Two types of seborrhea are distinguished. In one there is a great production of fatty scales, and this is called "oily seborrhea." In the other and more common type, the real dry scalp, the scales are tiny, branny flakes, and though they are really also fatty, they have the feel of being dry.

Infected Scalp

In dry seborrhea the hair is lusterless and the scalp is of a grayish hue. The condition usually comes on suddenly, and is apparently infectious, following a visit to a barber or to a hairdressing establishment, and especially following permanent waves. Barbers and hairdressers try very hard to maintain complete antiseptic precautions, but the laws of man and Nature are continuously against them. It is a wonder, indeed, that more cross infections do not occur on Saturday morning and afternoon when a dozen vain women or equally vain men are clamoring for beauty in order that they may desolate the associated cafe society at the grill, the casino, the fair or the club that night.

Then, again, this suddenness of onset could argue for a chemical cause, considering all the tonics, restorers, brilliantines, dyes, touchers-up, rinses and other esoteric and hagialogic applications that are frantically demanded by the aesthetic yearners for perfection.

Treatment Effective

No, all in all, the barbers and hairdressers have a good deal to contend with.

Treatment of dry scalp is very satisfactory. Oils and other remedies are usually recommended. Treatment should be continued indefinitely because seborrhea is essentially a chronic disorder.

In addition to the application of drugs, the scalp should be given such ordinary hygienic treatment as a washing once a week, and if the oil and scales do not come away with one vigorous shampoo, it should be repeated every other day.

Distinctive Coats for Town or Travel

Mounds of lynx form the collar of the travel coat at left. Its creamy coloring makes a delicate contrast to the imported woolen plaid which blends deep rose and pink with slate blue. A perfect casual traveling companion for the girl who can also afford a sleek town coat like the one below

The distinctive black woolen coat (right) is destined to make a success of future winter days in town. Its smooth imported fabric is animated by a gilet and muff of Eastern mink. The hat is a wing-crested antelope

Improve Your Pronunciation

PROMISING MOMENTS—how often they fizzle out. But few realize that the new friendship, the new job that seemed within grasp, may have been lost by poor English.

Even a pretty girl loses her charm and appeal if her talk bristles with crude mistakes: "DON'T the moon look beautiful? —You dance GOOD—Was that HER you WAS with?"

How differently she would sound to a desirable young man if she said corectly, DOESN'T the moon look beautiful?—You dance WELL —Was that SHE you WERE with?"

The less glaring errors need watching, too. The employer looking for "top flight" people for his organization rates as uncultivated the young man who says "MYSELF and father were in business —I BEGUN work there two years ago—I have used these KIND of records." He might have been first choice for the job if he had said "Father and I were—I BEGAN work—these KINDS of records."

No one consciously speaks incorrectly, but too often you are the last to be aware of your errors. Or perhaps at one time you knew better, but have grown careless.

That is why it's sensible to check your English from time to time. Then you quickly see your mistakes, practice right forms till they become a habit.

Tricky Winter Coats Play Role of Jekyll and Hyde

Fur Accessories That Zip On and Off Make Changes Possible; Fabrics Soft, Rich and Flattering; Lines Are Military

By Marshall Adams,

The Post Fashion Editor.

Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde are entering the fashion scene this fall through a two-sidedness in which the season's fashions are cloaking themselves. In short, the newest furred cloth coats, through the flick of a zipper or the removal of a fur neckpiece, can turn your whole fall and winter life into the acting out of dual personalities.

There is Marshall Adams plenty of drama in the patrician and highly becoming fall coats Washington women are buying now during August coat sales. These coats are enlivened by a new silhouette, soft, rich woolen fabrics, and interchangable fur accessories, which help stretch one basic coat into three or four costumes.

It was helpful to pick out their style high lights by discussing them with a man who has outfitted many of Washington's most discriminating women for years. Here is this expert's summary.

Line of Coat Is Military

The line of the coat is military. That means it is young and dapper. The newest dress coats have tiny waists, but not those pinched-in one of four or five years ago. The neckline has innumerable tricks, and there are a few tricks up the sleeves, too, such as fur-armed effects.

Skirts of the new coats are made to swing by goring or back-bustling fullness. Shoulders are wide. But there's no gross exaggeration of natural proportions. Ones best figure measurements are pointed up by feminine yet soldierly lines.

The biggest excitement of the new cloth coats comes from the fact that fur boleros, plastrons, or jackets are made to zip or snap off, leaving a simple, dark basic coat beneath. The same is true of silver fox or marten stoles and scarves which detach themselves. Thus the quick-change artist has a three-or four-in-one costume for the cost of one. First comes her jacket or neckpiece which she slips over her first fall frock. Next, her plain cloth coat for nippy fall days. Then her dead-of-winter coat with fur trimming, and finally her furs again, worn over her simple, long dinner wrap.

Importance Is Defined

The merchandise expert classified the new furs and fabrics in order of importance as:

Silver fox, softer and more beautiful than ever. It is used for plastrons, collars, skirt borders and for matching hats and muffs.

Next, Persian, as regal as usual. It is newest-looking when used for naive buster collars and as frontal borders or pipings.

Mink is next, with youthful jackets, schoolboy collars and round, amusing muffs. A fetching version, typical of the soft young look the sly mink affects, was a coat of French imported woolen, which looked like an upholsterer's needlepoint or frieze. It had a turned-down collar of Eastern mink, a pillow muff and pouchy saddle pockets of mink.

Fourth contender is beaver or mouton. This is another fur treated in guileless new ways. Even when the subtle hunter's greens, olives, wines and browns of imported duveteens are used, the price of mouton keeps these coats at modest figures.

One final comment from our adviser—the former crude, pebbly woolens are gone, leaving the seasons of 1939 and 1940 with only lush, kitten-soft woolens of sleek and suave appearance.

The Gentler Sex

I

JUDGE—Why do you want to divorce this woman?

PLAINTIFF—She was guilty of mental cruelty, your honor.

JUDGE—What do you mean?

PLAINTIFF—It was her hair, your honor—dead, dull, stringy, lusterless, dry, brittle, ratty, straw-like——

JUDGE—Just a minute. Did you ever speak to her about it?

PLAINTIFF—Indeed yes, sir, but she stubbornly refused to use La Fascination Shampoo, when only a 10-cent package would have transformed her hair into a shining, glistening vibrant aureole—woman's crowning glory——

JUDGE—Divorce granted!

II.

JUDGE—You say you caught your husband kissing another woman?

WIFE—Yes, your honor.

JUDGE—What have you to say for yourself, sir?

HUSBAND—Well-er—your honor I—I just couldn't resist her. It was her breath—sweet, tantalizing, like a whiff of magnolia blossoms. You see, your honor, the whole thing was—she used Dr. Pash's Baby Breath Gargle.

JUDGE—Why didn't you get your wife to use this gargle?

HUSBAND—I tried, your honor, but she held out for salt and soda.

JUDGE—Madam, your divorce is refused.

III.

JUDGE—You are being sued on a serious charge, sir—breach of promise. Why did you leave this girl waiting at the altar?

DEFENDENT—I made a discovery, your honor, that would have made our marriage impossible.

JUDGE—What was that?

DEFENDANT—Well, you see I had suspected something was wrong—from her smile. But I thought marriage might change all that. In fact, I had delicately hinted that she try Dr. Smirk's Lily Tooth Paste. But she paid no attention. And then, on the day of my wedding, a friend broke the terrible news to me. It was——I hate to say this publicly, your honor——

JUDGE—Go on.

DEFENDANT—It was—it was that she had PINK TOOTH-BRUSH!

JUDGE—Good heavens! Suit is dismissed.

IV

JUDGE—Why should a man like you, after 15 years of married life, want a divorce?

PLAINTIFF—My wife is no longer a stimulating, entertaining companion to me, your honor.

JUDGE—What do you mean?

PLAINTIFF—She's cross and tired when I come home nights and never wants to go anywhere.

JUDGE—Probably she has too much work to do.

PLAINTIFF—Yes, but if she would just use the Magic Helper Vacuum Cleaner she could do her work in ten minutes daily and be able to hold my love.

V

JUDGE—Why are you seeking a divorce after only six months of married life?

BRIDEGROOM—I was deceived, your honor. I did not discover until after marriage that my wife did not keep her skin like a rose petal by using Circe Nourishing Creme.

JUDGE—Was that all the trouble?

BRIDEGROOM—No, No! She didn't surprise me with delicious summer desserts made with Shako taploca; she didn't use Jiffey's canned soups and spent too much time in the kitchen leaving me to my own devices; she never served me Man Bait salad dressing; she never used Shimmie to make her jelly jell, or Skidoo Insect Powder to keep the cockroaches out of my sight; she let her face fall because she didn't use Cudd's chewing mints; she didn't develop her sex appeal by drinking Lady Linton's tea——

JUDGE—Wait, wait a minute! Has your wife any money?

BRIDEGROOM—She makes $40 a week, your honor.

JUDGE—Divorce granted, and I hereby order her to pay you $15 a week alimony.

A Woman's New York

By Alice Hughes

Dog Days Affect Tempers in Manhattan; Fair Attracts Scottish Home Economists

New York, Aug. 18.

THIS IS precisely the time of year when town-bound New Yorkers go mad and bite the butcher boy—which is not news, here. Our nerves, never too collected, are blown completely to shreds by late August. Fair visitors need not be unduly alarmed late in the Canine Days. Our bite is worse than our bark, which is awful, and we seldom sink the fangs. We merely snarl and snap.

Alice Hughes

The city heat, after about two months, does horrible things to us. The sky-scraping towers collect the heat during the day and blast it back at us after the evenin' sun goes down. The humidity seldom sinks below 99 per cent of the saturation point. The hot motor smells are hotter and smellier. And the noises, always a source of hysteria, finally drive us to the door of the rattlebox.

Perhaps I may have mentioned before the terrors of the opened windows on the apartment house courtyard. In my case, Spouse Hall and I are practically living with 250 other families who bunk around our Murray Hill court. We share their domestic brawls and their endless fights with the hired girl. We listen to their 250 radios at once. We share the moonlight howls and barks of their underprivileged dogs, and when they smash glassware and crockery on Saturday night, we feel as though the stuff had been busted on our own skulls.

And now August, 1939, has brought us new joys. First came the bellowing soprano, who hollers loud but sings something awful. She is the world's worst soprano, and if I knew where she lived, I'd call and tell her so, and then pulverize her with a ball bat. And then a new wood-wind note crept into the score.

After seven years in this flat, I actually heard the cry of a small baby the other night—the very first time this has happened. Can there be anything as normal as a baby in this courtyard? Or have I at last gone completely loopy, as long predicted by my loving friends? No doubt it is the latter.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—If further proof were needed of our late summer wackiness, it is always at this time that the new "dance crazes" (their promoters hope) are pushed out. Now it is the "Boomps-a-Daisy," another bit of British madness you have seen in newsreels, perhaps. It is a simple, silly thing, which takes its name from the fact that the partners bump their posteriors, now and again. Ah, the daffy didoes started by "The Big Apple!"

We have been enjoying the presence of all sorts of groups at the fair, and especially the call of 47 home economics teachers from Scotland. They were shown the latest tricks in American ways of preparing food economically. When it was all over Miss Elsie Cuthbertson who comes from Edinburgh, said our ways of cutting food costs were all old stuff to them. What really did bowl them over, added Miss Elsie, was the variety of our victuals. Whereupon they had a dish of tea all around . . .

Our fair's biggest booster is our invaluable little mayor, Mr. LaGuardia, who whoops for it day and night, here and elsewhere. He has battled especially for a huge attendance of children; he is quite right, and hundreds of thousands of youngsters have visited the big show. Their children will long hear of Flushing's wonders, just as many of us heard of the wonders of Chicago in '93 from the older folks.

Mary Chess, one of our smarter girls, has just cooked up a scented lacquer for use on the inside of the family clothescloset. Dries quickly, and the sweet smells are said to last months. Pretty crafty, eh?

Wheat Flakes, Calf's Liver, Says Baseball Idol Walter Johnson

By Martha Ellyn

The Post Food Editor

THE ACE PITCHER of the baseball world was born on a farm located between Iola and Humboldt, Kans. But the Sunflower State lost this great athlete to our city of Washington, for in 1907 Walter Johnson came out of the West to the Capital to become a pitching idol. For 20 years he was identified with the Washington Baseball Club.

Walter Johnson

In 1928 the "Newarks" " claimed him for four years, then on to Cleveland as manager of the "Indians" for three years. But Washington lured "Big Train" and now he hopes to make it his home for all time.

"What do I like to eat most of all?" said Mr. Johnson. "Well, I guess a good breakfast to start off the day. First, a big bowl of toasted wheat flakes. Right now, I am having them with peaches, and always with rich cream. No sugar! Then, I like calf's liver, but, it must be CALF'S liver. Some bacon, too. Buttered toast with raspberry jam and good, strong coffee rounds out a perfect breakfast for me."

The following receipe should do to a turn the Calf's Liver and Bacon that Mr. Johnson eats for breakfast:

Calf's Liver and Bacon

Select calf's liver cut ½ to ¾ inch thick, salt and pepper. For 1 pound of bacon, melt 4 tablespoons butter. Dip the liver in the melted butter and arrange on broiling rack. Broil 8 minutes, turn and arrange the bacon on the pan. Continue to broil 8 to 10 minutes, turning the bacon as needed. Serve garnished with broiled bacon and parsley.

No wonder Mr. Johnson goes in for such a hearty breakfast, for he is a dirt farmer living on a model farm near Germantown, Md., where he is actively engaged in farming. In his trophy room at his farm home are six baseballs tossed by six Presidents—Theodore Roosevelt, Taft, Wilson, Harding, Coolidge and Hoover, and caught by Mr. Johnson at the opening of various baseball seasons in Washington.

But baseball is not Walter Johnson's only forte, for on his farm he raises hogs, breeds horses and sends milk to Washington market from his fine dairy herd. He also raises Bourbon turkeys, which should find an early and unusual market this year. He raises rare chickens and mallard ducks, too.

Having faced the bats of Babe Ruth, Ty Cobb and others of baseball fame so successfully, throwing a silver dollar across the Rappahannock so triumphantly, now serving as a commissioner of Montgomery County, Md., in addition to his agricultural pursuits, broadcasting of baseball games, and acting as a columnist for baseball, I was curious to know what extraordinary foods he eats to obtain such remarkable vitality to carry on his varied activities.

Screens Return As Decorations

New York (AP).—Screens have come back into the decorative scene. You see them in all sizes, shapes and settings—from modest homes to swank city apartments.

They are used simply for decorative notes or they may serve some utilitarian purpose.

Charles Baskerville, New York artist who began painting screens 13 or 14 years ago as a hobby, has found them so fascinating that he now devotes much of his time to them. Consequently, you'll find Baskerville screens all over the map. An Illinois businessman who likes Morocco had Baskerville do a Moroccan mural for his dining room and match it with a screen. The Vincent Astor home has a Baskerville screen featuring a pet orangutan Mrs. Astor once gave her husband. Polo-player "Jock" Whitney has a colorful polo screen in his home. Poet, man-about-town Charles Hansen Towne has one in his New York apartment.

Your Figure, Madame!

By Ida Jean Kain

Carmen Miranda, To Aid Figure and Face, Sleeps 10 Hrs.

WHEN A GIRL whose English lines are limited to "ze Sous American way" stops a Broadway show, the general consensus is that she has something. Carmen Miranda, the Brazilian songbird creating such a fuss among theater-goers, has an international something that has already landed her a movie test.

Now, there are other beautiful showgirls East and West, and some are more beautiful than Miss Miranda. So what's the answer? Sheer vitality—and enough of it to warm the heart of a blase Broadway! Apparently the town has never seen such an example of exuberance.

Pie Almost Wrecked Her

When the famous Anna Held was a star, she took milk baths for glamour. The exotic Miss Miranda, does nothing more sensational than to drink her milk. To be sure, she usually drinks a quart a day, which may help to account for her beautiful skin and perfect teeth. She also eats quantities of fruits and vegetables and ordinarily never has to give her weight a thought.

But, you reducers will be interested to know that on arriving in this country she "almos' lose the figure." (She tells that with an expressive shudder and a roll of her eyes.) She was so intrigued by pie—the American national dessert—that within a few weeks she had put on about 10 pounds. "Jus' like Mae Wes'," she avers. So now it's no more pie—or ice cream, another weakness—and she has lost 5 pounds in two weeks.

Miss Miranda is athletic. She admits that maybe her country-women take too little exercise and would do well to copy their "Nort' " American neighbors who go in for sports. She shakes her head over the way the "Sous" American women just go to the beach and sit! She herself swims every day—and has an "oo-la-la" figure: Bust, 36½ inches; waist, 26 inches; hips, 38 inches. She weighs 118 pounds for a height of 5 feet 2.

Ten Hours Sleep, Too

In addition to swimming and eating the right foods, she believes strongly in getting ten hours of sleep every night. She is so energetic she needs it—besides, it's a wrinkle-chaser! To be frank, Miss Miranda would rather have a young face than a young figure. "If my face is old," she demanded logically, "what good is the young figure!"

The Brazilians don't talk about glamour. If a girl is very good-looking or seems to have that certain something, they say

Catholic Youth To Meet Here In 11th Session

3,000 Are Expected At C. U. Tuesday For Mission Crusade

More than 3,000 high school and college students, from all parts of the United States and Canada, will converge on Catholic University Tuesday for the opening of the eleventh annual convention of the Catholic Students' Mission Crusade.

Part of an organization of some 700,000 young men and women, the delegates will meet missionaries from the Orient, Africa, South America, the Northlands, and other places, and receive first-hand information on the methods being used to carry the gospel to these lands.

They also will see that leaders of the Catholic Church are planning a very definite place for religion in the world of tomorrow, and that it will be modernized to meet the exigencies of the coming era, through the use of motor trailer chapels and other means.

Built for China Use

On exhibition in the Shrine of the Immaculate Conception will be the trailer chapel, built by an American company and designed for use on the rough roads of inland China. Equipped with all the furnishings of a small church, the trailer provides living accommodations for the missionary and is complemented with a public address system operating from batteries.

An address of welcome by the Right Rev. Monsignor Joseph M. Corrigan, rector of Catholic University, on Tuesday night formally will launch the conclave. Among the highspots will be Pontifical Mass at the stadium at 10 a. m., preceded by a procession around the campus, of the clergy and laity.

Beckman to Be Celebrant

Archbishop Francis J. L. Beckman, executive chairman of the crusade, will be celebrant of the mass, at which the main address will be given by Bishop Eugene J. McGuiness, of Raleigh. St. John's Cadets will serve as a guard of honor. Ushers will be members of the Sea Scouts, under the leadership of Hugh Armstrong.

General sessions are to be held in the college gymnasium with panel discussions in the various auditoriums. Outstanding leaders such as the Rev. Dr. Joseph Fenton, of Catholic University; the Rev. Laurence Curtis, C. M., of China; the Rev. John A. Killian, S. J., India, and the Rev. Charles B. Erb, of the Catholic University of Peking, will conduct them.

Leaders to Preside

Archbishop Francis Spellman, of New York, will preside over one of the meetings, as will the Very Rev. John E. Kuhn, national director of the Confraternity of Christian Doctrine; the Rev. Joseph A. Newman, author of Crusade's new round-table course for catechists; Mgr. Edward A. Freking, national secretary of the Crusade; Mgr. Thomas J. McConnell, national director of the Propagation of the Faith.

Young men's, young women's, seminarists', high school, college, seminary and veteran member panels are scheduled, as well as mission-aid, crusade leadership, interracial and religious education meetings. The conference will colse Friday with a mass for peace; election of national officers, and a peace meeting addressed by Mgr. Freking.

Christ Scientists' Subject Is 'Mind'

"Mind" is the subject of the lesson-sermon in all the Churches of Christ Scientist, tomorrow at 11 a. m. and 8 p. m. Sunday school is at 11 a. m.

The Golden Text is from Romans 11:34,36. "Who hath known the mind of the Lord? or who hath been his counsellor? For of Him, and through Him, and to Him, are all things: to whom be glory forever."

Among the citations which comprise the lesson-sermon is the following from the Bible: "The earth is the Lord's, and the fulness thereof; the world, and they that dwell therein." (Psalms 24:1.)

The lesson-sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "The real jurisdiction of the world is in mind, controlling every effect and recognizing all causation as vested in Divine Mind."

A Little Too Much for Aubrey to Handle

Eleven-month-old Aubrey Reginald, son of Mr. and Mrs. Granville Cannon, of 2214 Tunlaw road northwest, is giving studied thought to the proper technique on a ham bone at the congregational supper held Thursday night at Mount Tabor Methodist Church. Mrs. Cannon was among the church workers

Church of the Week

Wisconsin Avenue Baptists Cheer Their Crippled Friends

Group of Churchmen Conduct Service On Second Sunday of Each Month For Inmates of Home for Incurables

Wisconsin Avenue Baptist Church's house of worship is of modest size, and its congregation is small, but scores of less fortunate human beings are being cheered by the parishioners' "bigness of heart."

For, every second Sunday of the month for the last seven years—without a break—a group of churchmen have traveled to the Home for the Incurables at Wisconsin avenue and Tilden street northwest to conduct devotional services, led by their pastor, the Rev. Clarence R. Ferguson.

Rev. Ferguson

While the residents of the home, some of them in wheel-chairs, come from their rooms to listen, the visitors lift their voices in sacred song, read the Scriptures, bring messages of inspiration and other spiritual gifts.

Congregation Commended

Lauding the work of the churchmen, Mrs. Ida Viner, superintendent of the home, said yesterday that the residents deeply appreciate the services and eagerly look forward to them. Mrs. Viner has commended the congregation on several occasions for its fine spirit.

Moving spirits behind the Home for the Incurables project are the four Baptist Young People's Unions, of which Mabel Schriver, Owen Ridgway and Miss Helen Fowler are leaders. Members of these societies also play an active role in other congregational work, serving as leaders of the Sunday school, volunteering as choristers on Sunday nights and performing other duties. Miss Grace W. Bellman is choir organist. An adult choir leads morning worship services.

S. Ridgway

Superintendent of the up and coming Sunday school, fully departmentalized, is A. Stanley Ridgway, who, although coming here only a short while ago from New Jersey, already has developed into an active leader. Among the teachers are Mrs. Edward J. Fox, Mrs. C. R. Ferguson, Miss Helen Fowler, Miss Jean Norman, Miss Syme Vaataja, Mrs. Edward Clemons and others. Ridgway is also temporary leader of the school's adult unit.

Active in Mission Work

The parishioners' unselfish spirit also is exemplified in the stress laid upon missionary enterprises, both home and foreign. Functioning under the Women's Missionary Society, of which Mrs. Edward J. Fox is president, the project covers the studying of the mission fields and strives to create congregation-wide interest in the work.

Special collections are taken once monthly, missionary rallies are held, and each fall books, clothing and other articles are sent to the McGoffin Institute in Kentucky. Ten per cent of all church and Sunday school offerings are alloted for missionary work. On the fourth Sunday of each month a missionary program is held at the close of the worship services, with Mrs. Thales Bowen in charge.

Other organizations and leaders include the men's Bible class, taught by Edward J. Fox; the women's Bible class, led by Mrs. Thales Bowen; the board of deacons, with Thales Bowen as chairman; the board of trustees, consisting of Woodie R. Jones, Bowen and Fox, and the board of deaconesses. Jones is treasurer of the general fund; Fox is treasurer of the building fund, and Mrs. Bowen is treasurer of the missionary fund.

Building Fund Grows

Forty per cent of all contributions are being applied toward the building fund, with the hope that when the present debt is cleared, plans for larger quarters can be considered.

The congregation, organized 50 years ago and which for a long time worshiped on Wisconsin avenue near River road northwest, has been led since 1928 by the Rev. Mr. Ferguson, who immediately prior to coming here served in Iowa. The present building on Fessenden street near Wisconsin avenue was constructed in 1924.

Capt. M. D. Smith To Address Class

Capt. Milton D. Smith, head of the traffic squad of the Metropolitan Police Department, will address the Harrison Bible class of Congress Street Methodist Church tomorrow at 9:45 a. m. "What Alcohol Costs Our Community" is the subject.

Little Stories about GREAT HYMNS

"HE LEADETH ME"
*Rev. Joseph H. Gillmore
"He leadeth me, O blessed tho't!
O words with heavenly comfort fraught!
Whate'er I do, where'er I be,
Still 'tis God's hand that leadeth me."
Chorus:
"He leadeth me, He leadeth me!
By His own hand He leadeth me!
His faithful foll'wer I would be,
For by His hand He leadeth me."

*The Rev. Joseph H. Gillmore, son of Governor Joseph A. Gillmore, of New Hampshire, was a native of Boston, Mass. In 1862, he was conducting a prayer-meeting in the First Baptist Church, Philadelphia, on the theme of Psalm 23 and after the service, in a home nearby, he continued the subject in conversation and right then received an inspiration to write this hymn.

* WASHINGTON: SATURDAY, AUGUST 19, 1939 11

D. A. R. Sees 2 Holidays November 23

Frederick Chapter Is Torn Between Turkey Tradition And Crumpets

By the Associated Press

Frederick, Md., Aug. 18.—President Roosevelt's streamlined Thanksgiving plans rediscoverd an almost forgotten Maryland holiday and precipitated an historico-gastronomic crisis in the Frederick Chapter, of the D. A. R., now emotionally torn between historic crumpets and traditional turkey.

Mrs. F. H. Markell, vice regent, explained that November 23, to which date the President proposes to advance Thanksgiving, is "Repudiation Day," just about the most historic occasion in Frederick County.

On November 23, 1765, "12 immortal judges" in Frederick County were first in the colonies to repudiate the stamp tax of King George III, beating Massachusetts and Virginia to the repudiating punch, the local D. A. R. would have you know.

The Daughters always have celebrated "Repudiation Day" by having the clerk of the Frederick Circuit Court read the revered document, and holding a formal tea afterward. The conflict in dates also brought out the fact that November 23 is already a legal holiday in Frederick County, by act of the Maryland Legislature, but only the D. A. R. ever observed it.

So now, since the Rooseveltian obiter dicta, they don't know what to do. Tea before Thanksgiving dinner wouldn't be so good—and who'd want it after?

It's all very exasperating, and Mrs. Markell made no bones about the piece of her mind she'd like to give the President.

"I don't approve," she said, "of the President's Thanksgiving change. It's taking a liberty with our country and its people I don't think he has a right to take. Thanksgiving is an old established custom, and old established customs shouldn't be tampered with."

Mrs. James H. Harris, regent, said the tea versus turkey question, Repudiation or Thanksgiving, would be settled September 26 at the next chapter meeting.

Virginia Given Land For Forest Purposes

Charlottesville, Va., Aug. 18.—Thousands of acres in Buckingham, Cumberland and Prince Edward counties, formerly occupied for resettlement by the Federal Government, have been turned over to the Virginia Conservation Commission for use as a State forest, under the supervision of the Virginia Forest Service, it was announced today by Fred C. Pederson, State forester.

The properties, transferred in a recent agreement signed by Secretary of Agriculture Wallace, include six lakes—Goodwin, in Prince Edward, 13½ acres; Prince Edward, for colored use, in Prince Edward, 32 acres; Winston, Cumberland County, 10½ acres; Bear Creek, Cumberland County, 50 acres; Horse Pen, Buckingham County, 26½ acres, and Holliday, Buckingham County, 140 acres.

Road Worker Accidents Cut 375% in Va.

Engineer Credits Safety Consciousness For Big Reduction

By the Associated Press

Richmond, Va., Aug. 18.—Giles M. Robertson, safety engineer of the State highway department, reported today the number of employes suffering injury in the course of their work had been reduced from 2,512 in 1932-33 to 671 in 1938-39, a decrease of approximately 375 per cent.

The continuous decline over the seven-year period, Robertson said, could be attributed largely to a concerted effort to make all highway workers accident-conscious through the establishment of safety committees in all the 57 areas having resident engineers.

The organization work was started in January, 1933, and in 1933-34 the number of injured employes dropped to 1,635. The trend has continued from year to year and the committee's work has shown a corresponding expansion.

They meet monthly for discussion of accidents that have occurred, to place the blame for them and to prepare reports and recommendations for the safety engineer. Each committee includes the resident engineer, a permanent member, and six other employes who serve terms of three months each.

In addition to the educational work of the committees, Robertson said the department required the use of safety devices and provided first aid facilities for those who are injured.

In the operation of the department's fleet of 1,400 vehicles, the safety record has been good enough to bring a 52 per cent reduction from the manual insurance rates on bodily injury and a 68 per cent discount on property damage.

"There is a constant effort to develop careful drivers—an effort, incidentally, which should contribute to highway safety generally because the department drivers will continue to be careful drivers when operating their own vehicles," Robertson said.

The department has 4,780 regular employes. With the addition of per diem workers, the number is around 8,000.

Barbara Kay, 10, Gets Back Raggedy Ann From Dollnapers

Who kidnaped Raggedy Ann and demanded a ransom of 75 cents for her return? That's what Barbara Kay, 10, would like to know, but she doesn't worry much now, because she has her dollie back again. After four days Raggedy Ann was found, unharmed, in the playhouse at Barbara's Arlington, Va., home.

Dastardly Culprits, Denied 75 Cents Ransom, Leave Arlington Girl's 'Baby' in the Playhouse

Between her affection for Raggedy Ann, a doll, and 75 cents, a big chunk in her savings, 10-year-old Barbara Kay, of Arlington, knew what a mother feels like when kidnapers have been around. But the doll is back now.

Four days ago, Barbara and her mother, Mrs. Austin M. Kay, of 108 North Irving street, Arlington, had gone to Barbara's doll house to find a window open and this note on the floor:

"If you want the doll, you had better leave 75 cents in the window sill. If ransom is not paid in a week, good-by Miss Dolly." The note had been written on paper torn from a bag. It was signed with a star.

Barbara had been given the doll during an outing at Marshall Hall Park two years ago. She wanted to pay the ransom. But her family intervened. Then, yesterday, the doll was found in the play house. And no ransom had been paid.

Hens' Gizzard Ills Studied At Beltsville

Poultry Paralysis Believed Traceable To 'Erosion'

A stomach disorder among chickens known technically as "gizzard erosion," is the object of intensive research at the Animal Nutrition Division of the Beltsville Research Center.

Dr. Harry W. Titus, director of the Poultry Nutrition Section, said yesterday 90 per cent of baby chicks tested had been afflicted. The ailment is characterized by breaking of the tissues of the gizzard.

While apparently not dangerous in itself, Dr. Titus said, the erosion provides "ports of entry" for viruses and may be the reason for the poultry virus getting into the systems of chickens.

Poultry paralysis has caused more poultry losses in the last ten years than any other disease, accounting for 50 per cent of pullet deaths.

"That is one of the chief reasons why we are eager to find a cure for gizzard erosion," Dr. Titus said. "As the result of numerous experiments, we have found that artificially induced disfunction of the billiary system will produce gizzard erosion."

An interesting point about gizzards, Dr. Titus said, is that chickens may live without them if they are fed on a diet of "mash." Some time ago, in connection with digestive experiments, Dr. Titus said, a cockerel's gizzard was removed by an operation and he lived for four years afterward, the average life span of a chicken.

'Preach God,' Cleric Urges At Conference

Dr. Morgan Stresses Duty of Minister At Bible School Session

By the Associated Press

Harrisonburg, Va., Aug. 18.—Dr. F. Crosley Morgan, of Atlanta, challenged the ministers of the Nation today to give themselves to the one great thing for which they are called—the ministery of the word and prayer.

"We as ministers of the word have just one thing to do and that is to preach God," said Dr. Morgan at the nineteenth Massanetta Springs Summer Bible Conference.

"Any difusion of our energy aside from preaching the word of God," he said, "is a failure of the first order. The minister is called upon to fill too many offices in the church. The only place for a good mixer is in the kitchen. No man can be a clown six days in the week and a prophet on the seventh. Congregations are starving for the preaching which nourishes the souls of men."

Dr. Bernard Claussen, of Pittsburgh, telling the conference "I saw America" said that if the vicious circle of returning evil for evil as it exists today were broken the world would go forward with much more progress.

Glenn L. Martin, whose name has been linked with aviation for more than a quarter of a century, stepped into a westbound passenger plane Thursday for his third plane ride in 15 years. Insurance commitments, recently lifted, have been a factor in keeping him out of the air. He is shown with his mother, Mrs. Minta Delong Martin, at the Washington Airport. He said this is a vacation trip

Councilmen Resigning in Takoma Park

Orcutt and Axtell's Action Attributed To Hatch Law; Two Others Await Ruling

Capt. Harold Orcutt, Takoma Park town councilman for six years, and Harold Axtell, councilman for two, have resigned, presumably as a result of the Hatch law, it was learned yesterday.

Mayor John R. Adams and Councilman Philip Huck, also Federal employes, are reported to be contemplating resigning. They are waiting the decision of Attorney General Murphy as to whether Federal workers may serve out their terms, it was reported.

The resignations of Orcutt and Axtell have not yet been accepted, although the former has requested that his withdrawal be accepted without delay, said J. Wilson Dodd, town clerk.

Whether Mayor Adams and the council would meet in special session to discuss the resignations before their regular meeting at the fire department Monday night was undecided last night.

Orcutt is chairman of the civic improvement and education committee, having served for several years as master of ceremonies at the annual independence day celebration in Takoma Park. Axtell was chairman of the municipal works committee.

Since Adams and Huck will be ineligible to take any action on the appointment of any new councilmen, three remaining town fathers will be faced with a peculiar problem. Three officers would not have the authority to act on any matter or have the power to call a special election to fill the vacancies since the town charter provides that any action by the council must be made by four of its members.

Road Commission To Study Bridges

Hagerstown, Aug. 18.—The State roads commission will make a survey of the Leitersburg Bridge on the Hagerstown-Waynesboro highway and will make a recommendation and give the estimated cost for correcting the narrow span, scene of many accidents, the Hagerstown Chamber of Commerce executive committee was informed at a conference this week with the commission in Baltimore.

The chamber added its appeal to a number of petitions to have the bridge widened, which have been sent in recent weeks to the commission and also to Gov. Herbert R. O'Conor. The commission told the chamber representatives that an engineer will be sent here shortly to survey the bridge.

100 Workers Strike On Richmond Project

Richmond, Va., Aug. 18 (AP).—Labor Commissioner Thomas B. Morton said today approximately 100 workers were on strike at the Richmond deep water terminal because of what they termed "unsatisfactory conditions."

He said some of the carpenters, plumbers, painters, cement finishers and steel workers were dissatisfied with a condition requiring that they start work at 5 a. m., in order that as much daylight as possible might be utilized.

Gov. Price Crowns 'Miss Virginia'

Police Say Suspect Admits Robbing D. C. Jurist's Home

Police yesterday announced they had solved the robberies of three well-known Washingtonians, including a District Court justice, with the confession of a 50-year-old housebreaking suspect. The loot in the three cases totaled more than $5,000.

"Caught in the act" at the home of D. F. Groot, 3900 Ingomar street northwest, Tuesday, the suspect admitted the jobs yesterday in New York. He was taken there Thursday when police received a tip that he was taking stolen property to a "fence" in that city.

Policemen D. M. Brown and F. L. Stouffer, Eighth Precinct, arrested the man after he had jimmied a window at the Groot home. He denied breaking in to steal and refused to answer qustions.

Yesterday Inspector Bernard W. Thompson received word from New York that almost $500 worth of silver stolen from the home of Paul E. Lesh, 2820 Thirty-second street northwest, July 24, had been recovered, that the suspect confessed robbing the home of Justice James Proctor, and also the home of Harry Hoskinson, 3410 Garfield street northwest, in October, 1938.

Lesh's house was ransacked and the thief drove away in the family automobile after taking a set of duplicate keys from a dresser drawer. A similar incident occurred when Judge Proctor's home was entered. Both cars were abondoned later.

Jewelry and silverware stolen from Justice Proctor's and Hoskinson's homes were recovered last year but no arrests were made.

The Hoskinson home, 3410 Garfield street northwest, was entered by a "jimmy" thief and a silver service worth $1,200 and $400 worth of other valuables taken. The property later turned up in New York, but police never were able to pin the robbery on any one person.

The same occurred in the Proctor case. More than $300 worth of the justice's jewelry was found in Baltimore. The Proctor home is at 4615 Linnean avenue northeast.

Phone Subscribers At Smithburg, Md., Prefer Operators

Baltimore, Aug. 18 (AP).—Smithburg residents don't go for impersonal telephone service.

The Public Service Commission today received a petition signed by 184 Smithburg telephone subscribers protesting against the proposal to change their present manually operated telephones to a dial system.

"We feel," the petition stated, "that we would not receive the same high-type service now rendered by operators."

Manassas 'Battle' Arouses Widow to Tell of War Days

Oldest East Falls Church Resident Marks 95th Birthday; Husband Traded Tobacco for Sugar, With Yankee

Mrs. Flora Baker Hiett, oldest resident of East Falls Church, sat on the porch of her son's home yesterday, spinning yarns about Civil War days.

She observed her ninety-fifth birthday this week, and with the Regulars and National Guard reenacting the Battle of Manassas, the elderly but spry matron naturally reminisced of war episodes that still thrill her, especailly of her soldier sweetheart, now dead.

Sitting back and prefacing her tale with "Now this is a true story," Mrs. Hiett began:

'In the early days of the war a youth, mounted on a spirited horse, was sent out to guard along the Rapidan River. Reaching his station, he had not been there long before he heard a voice say, "Good morning'

Enemies Traded Supplies

"The youth looked up the high bank and, to his surprise, saw a Union soldier. The youth answered: 'Good morning,' then asked, 'Why don't you kill me?'

"The enemy replied: 'I am not here to kill you, but to watch you.'

"The youth and the soldier awkwardly eyed each other for a minute, and then the Union man asked: 'Have you any tobacco?' The youth replied that he had, and did the Unionist have any sugar? So they exchanged. And the youth, holding tight his few lumps of precious sugar, dashed safely for his camp, never again seeing the Union soldier who had spared his life."

Mrs. Hiett smiled, then concluded: "I married that youth in 1872."

The youth was oseph T. Hiett, who served in the Confederate Army under Gen. Turner Ashby and who died in 1897.

Friends Mark Birthday

Mrs. Hiett vividly remembers how the troops of Gen. Jubal Early raced through her father's fields near Winchester, Va., while maneuvering to outflank opposing Union forces.

Today she still is an active member of the Falls Church Episcopal Church and rarely misses services or Sunday school. She also is a leading member of the Robert E. Lee Chapter, United Daughters of the Confederacy.

A native of Frederick County, Va., Mrs. Hiett settled in Falls Church with her husband in 1896. She makes her home with a son, H. Lee Hiett, 6732 North Twenty-fifth street, East Falls Church, where family and neighbors honored her with a birthday party Thursday night.

In good health, Mrs. Hiett enjoys the three-block walk to Lee Highway to the Washington-bound bus and a frequent shopping tour.

Flag Pageant Rained Out; Price Speaks

Governor Braves Storm To Crown Miss Virginia In Arlington Stadium

Although the "Birth of the Flag" pageant was called off because of rain last night, Gov. James H. Price of Virginia carried on the prepageant program at the Arlington County Youth Stadium by crowning "Miss Virginia" and then shaking hands with 200 spectators who braved the downpour to greet the State's chief executive.

Dorothy Simpson was officially named "Miss Virginia" in a brief ceremony at the grandstand. Gov. Price, in a short speech, praised the purpose of the Americanism-inspiring pageant and commended the county for producing the 1,000-cast spectacle. Earlier he toured the county and observed that it was one of the "most progressive" in the Nation.

Tonight the pageant will mark "Virginia Day," with a parade preceding the performance, and a Wild West show following. State, county and community officials will participate in the stadium exercises, at which Miss Jane Smoot will be presented as "Miss Fairfax."

A procession, including Mildred Bolen, "Queen of the Flag," six princesses and the queen's ladies-attendant, together with 15 fire engines from northern Virginia communities and a reproduction of an early Baltimore & Ohio train, will move from Arlington to Falls Church and back.

Ground-Breaking Soon On Takoma Park Center

Ground will be broken on the proposed shopping center at Carroll and Sycamore avenues, Takoma Park, Md., before September 1, it was announced yesterday by Garfield, Kas., president of the Kass Co. who are developing the project.

The project, which has been delayed several times, will be built in two units, one section having eight stores with apartment, while the other unit will consist of a theater with a seating capacity of 1,000 persons.

Boonsboro Cantaloupe Crop Hit by Drought

Boonsboro, Aug. 18.—The cantaloupe crop in this area will be about half its usual size, growers reported today. They blamed a wet spring and dry summer. The heavy rains in the spring made replanting necessary, and the lack of rain later kept the vines from maturing.

Boonsboro cantaloupes, smaller than those grown in other localities, have a distinctive flavor derived from a soil around this town which is high in minerals. Most of the crop is sold in Washington County and in Washington.

Save Water, Arlington Is Requested

Residents Asked Not To Sprinkle Lawns From 5 to 9 During Drought

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST, Clarendon, Va. Tel. OXford 0809.

Owing to the drought, A. T. Lundberg, superintendent of the Arlington County water department, yesterday issued a request that all residents of the county co-operate with the department in its efforts to conserve the supply of water for essentials. He asked the residents to eliminate the use of water for sprinkling lawns between 5 p. m. and 9 p. m. until further notice.

Due to the rapid development and the many added daily consumers, the department has been taxed to capacity, Lundberg asserted.

He pointed out that the department was working on a plan to give uninterrupted water service but the unusual weather conditions have made the task almost impossible.

Green Announces Candidacy

Arlington.—Declaring he did not believe good government was promoted by officeholders taking part in outside activities, John Locke Green yesterday in a letter to County Republican Chairman Lawrence Michael announced his candidacy for county treasurer against Charles T. Jesse, Democratic incumbent.

Mr. Green, indorsed as the party nominee at the county convention last week, said:

"I want to say that if I am elected to the office of county treasurer I will not engage in the practice of law, either directly or indirectly, and that I will not appear before boards or other public bureaus except in my official capacity as county treasurer; and that I will have no connections, privately or publicly, with anyone whose interests would effect the public; nor will I become a member of any law firm, or become associated with any lawyer, directly or indirectly, in the practice of law, while I am county treasurer."

Cranford Church Has Homecoming

Homecoming Day, a feature of the Loyalty Month Campaign, will be observed tomorrow at Cranford Memorial Methodist Church, Lorton, Va., affiliated with the Occoquan charge.

The Rev. H. H. Hoyt, Indianhead, Md., will deliver an address at 11 a. m., and the Rev. Glenn Cooper, also of Maryland, will speak at 2:30 p. m. The Rev. D. N. Calvert, pastor of the Occoquan charge, will preach at the Occoquan Church at 8 p. m.

Each service will be preceded by a half-hour song service, in which the Fairfax Choir, consisting of Fague Springman, baritone; Mrs. Alice Shaver, soprano; Claggett Hawkins, baritone, and Dick Kavaljian, violinist, will participate. A picnic lunch will be served in the oak grove at the Cranford Church.

Teacher Is Appointed

The Falls Church Town School Board yesterday appointed Miss Zula Ferrara, of Fredericksburg, to succeed Miss Nellye Roberts as teacher of commercial subjects in Jefferson High School. Miss Ferrara has taught for three years in the Tappahannock High School, which discontinued commercial courses.

Carnival Set At Sandy Spring

Volunteer fire companies from nearby Maryland and Virginia will participate in a parade and fire-fighting contest next Saturday in connection with the annual carnival of the Sandy Spring Fire Department.

Opening event of the carnival will be a baseball game between teams from Colesville and Dayton, starting at 2:30 p. m. The parade will be held at 4:30 o'clock followed by an exhibition and contest for junior drum and bugle corps. A hookup contest will take place at 5:30 o'clock. Concluding the program will be a fried chicken and ham supper and a dance in the Sherwood High School auditorium.

Carnival to Close

The annual carnival of St. James Catholic Church, Thirty-seventh street and Rhode Island avenue, Mount Rainier, Md., will close tonight. W. K. Wersick, chairman, said numerous prizes would be given as a special attraction of the closing night.

'Seeds of Life' Is Topic

The Rev. Walter M. Lockett, jr., will speak tomorrow at 11 a. m. at the Community Methodist Church, Key boulevard and North Bryan street, Arlington, on "Sowing Seeds of Life."

Arlington Sermon Themes

"Prepositions That Started a Revolution" and "The Spirit of the Crusader" will be the Rev. Lewis F. Havermale's morning and evening topics, respectively, tomorrow at the Arlington Methodist Church, South Fillmore and Columbia pike.

46,000 See White Sox Beat Feller in 11th, 1-0

The Washington Post Sports

12 WASHINGTON: SATURDAY, AUGUST 19, 1939 ****

Cleveland Hurler Gives 3 Hits, Loses

Ed Smith, Chicago Pitcher, Scores Run To End Thriller; Hayes' Hit Counts

By International News Service

Chicago, Aug. 18.—Bob Feller, Cleveland's spectacular fireballer, pitched a magnificent game tonight under the Comiskey Park oodlights, but it was not quite good enough, for the Chicago White Sox got to him in the last of the eleventh for a 1-to-0 win.

Up to then, Feller had allowed only a lone hit, but when the Sox came to bat in the eleventh, Pitcher Eddie Smith, who downed the great Feller, was walked. Second Baseman Hayes cracked out a double over Chapman's head in centerfield, sending Smith to third.

Joe Kuhel was passed intentionally, filling the bases. Then "Iron Mike" Kreevich smacked a single which grought Smith home with the winning run.

For sheer pitching drama, with both mound artists starring, and for general baseball perfection, the game was the most sensational the Chicago fans have witnessed this season. There were 46,000 of them there tonight who were sent into screaming hysteria when Smith came trotting home with the ball game.

The victory was the first the Six have achieved over Feller this year after four defeats and that winning tally also ended a string of 22 scoreless innings Bob had hung up against them.

While Feller allowed only three hits to Smith's seven, better control eventually gave Smitty the edge. He issued only two walks to Feller's six.

Springfield Fans Rebel At Transfer

Action Is Aftermath Of Investigation Of Cambria Dealings; Welaj 'Mystified'

By Shirley Povich.

Outfielder John Welaj and First Baseman Bob Prichard today find themselves in Washington uniforms on the order of Baseball Commissioner Landis, following a baseball tempest that startled the fans of Springfield, Mass., where the Nats operate an Eastern League farm.

Joe Cambria, owner of the Springfield Club, was ordered by Landis to return the two players to Washington, which had sent them on option to Springfield a few weeks ago. Landis cracked down on Cambria harshly, following a long investigatin of Cambria's Springfield dealings, which had no relation to Welaj and Prichard.

Welaj, who arrived in Washington last night, declared he was completely mystified by the turn of events. "All that I know is that on Wednesday at 6 p. m. Prichard and I received telegrams from Clark Griffith ordering us to stay out of the double-header that night and report to Washington immediately."

Fans Cause Scene

"When the announcement was made to Springfield fans there was quite a scene. We were scheduled to play a double-header with Williamsport, which was pressing us for the lead, and it was a crucial series. Spencer Abbot, Springfield manager, had to send a pitcher to the infield and hire a sandlotter to play in the outfield.

"Springfield lost both games to Williamsport and also the league lead. The Springfield newspapers and fans were up in arms when they heard that Landis had ordered Prichard and me and a pitcher named Douglas Dean out of the Springfield line-up. The fans declared that they would not support organized baseball in Springfield in the future.

A month ago Landis called Cambria "on the carpet" in New York and demanded data on his operations with the Springfield team on the threat to force Cambria out of the Eastern League. On Cambria's promise to supply the information Landis permitted him to operate the club, but on Tuesday, in the absence of the information promised him by Cambria, he cracked down.

Ordered Back to Nats

His first move was to order Prichard and Welaj, who had been obtained on option from Washington a few weeks ago, back to the Nats. He also forbade Cambria to acquire any other players from teams in organized baseball, which thus limits Cambria to signing free agents only. Yesterday Cambria signed Free Agent Shanty Hogan, bulky catcher who was released by the Nats two years ago and has been out of baseball for a full year.

Clark Griffith last night declared that he would respect Landis' order and carry Welaj on the Washington club. Welaj may be retained for duty against left-handed pitching, but Prichard is expected to be transferred to the minors.

Commissioner Landis could not be reached in Chicago for a statement last night, the Associated Press reported, but yesterday afternoon he said investigation re Prichard and Welaj was incomplete. He declined to comment further on the case now.

POVICH

The Kentucky Derby wasn't even a gleam in Matt Winn's eye, and the Pimlico Preakness was as unknown as Hitler's intentions when the folks up Saratoga way staged the first running of their Travers Stakes. Lincoln was President, Sherman had not yet made his march to the sea and the Union was in a you-know-what-kind-of shape. That was 1864, when the Travers was born.

For one particular reason the Travers has been our favorite hoss race. We first began to like it back in 1930, and here it is again this afternoon. Today as the field goes to the post the burning question is: Johnstown or Eight Thirty? The starting bell will find them co-favorites in a five-horse field. If anything else wins, you will be able to brain the bookies with a feather.

Nine years ago on a Saturday afternoon the question that was disturbing the country was: Gallant Fox or Whichone? Whichone or Gallant Fox? They were going to the post in the Travers as the tightest-matched pair in the 76-year-old history of the race. It was the powerful Whitney Stable against the rich Woodward barn. It was Sande vs. Workman. It was the perfect recipe for an aristocratic afternoon at the races.

They weren't the only horses in the race, Whichone and Gallant Fox, but almost they were. There were only two other contenders in the four horse field. A pair of interlopers named Sun Falcon and Jim Dandy refused to be scared out of the race by the presence of the two super-greats.

Jim Dandy Was Only Glorified Plater

In that four-horse field Gallant Fox was the favorite. The son of Sir Gallahad, with the clever Sande on his back, commanded odds of only 1 to 2 as he pranced postward. Whichone, the only contender with a chance to beat him, was 13 to 10. On the others—Sun Falcon and Jim Dandy—you could virtually name your own price. The few bets on Sun Falcon were at 20 to 1. The bookies' odds board showed 100 to 1 against Jim Dandy, a glorified plater who, moreover, was blind in one eye.

We began liking the Travers Stakes from the moment the first horse reached the finish line that afternoon. Because it will forever stand as some sort of a symbol that holds out hope and encouragement for the underdog. What happened that afternoon was tantamount to the same sort of upset that would have been registered this summer if Referee Arthur Donovan had kayoed both Joe Louis and Tony Galento in the ring at Yankee Stadium and emerged as the champion of the world.

Because on that Saturday afternoon at Saratoga nine years ago, the winner was not Gallant Fox, the 1-to-2 shot, nor was it Whichone, the 13 to 10 shot. Nor was it even Sun Falcon, the 20 to 1 shot. A total stranger came galloping home with the $27,500 winner's share of the purse that day—the 100 to 1 shot Jim Dandy, kicking mud in the faces of his aristocratic playmates.

If Jim Dandy could do that sort of thing to Gallant Fox and Whichone, then there will forever be hope for such as Bob Pastor against Joe Louis, for the second-place Red Sox in their battle with the Yankees, and perhaps even for the Nats to win a pennant sometime again. Certainly they are something less than 100 to 1 shots.

It Wasn't the Start—but the Finish!

The fact is that Jim Dandy was somewhat over-layed that afternoon at Saratoga. Because it came up mud, and as Challeden proved in the Preakness against Johnstown, as Clyde Van Dusen showed when he won the Kentucky Derby, mud can be the great leveller and Jim Dandy was known to like the mud. He didn't appear to have the class of Gallant Fox or Whichone but in mud matters are different. And when he flashed across the finish line as the winner, Saratoga bettors painfully recalled that he could run in the mud. They knew it because only a year before, as a despised 2-year-old in the fashionable Grand Union Hotel Stakes at Saratoga, he came galloping home at 60 to 1.

That Travers of 1930 began as the 40,000 fans expected it to begin, but ye gods, what a surprising finish. But to return to the start, it was Whichone and Gallant Fox, Workman and Sande, making the show more than a mile of the mile-and-a-quarter distance. Their early turn of speed catapulted the pair to the front at the rise of the barrier, and it was neck and neck into the backstretch.

Before the far turn was reached, Workman, on Whichone, roused his mount to even terms with Gallant Fox, and Sande also shook his mount up. Around the bend they raced as a team, and turned into the stretch with Whichone still on the rail and very much in the race. Then came disaster for Whichone.

The Whitney colt partially broke down, bearing out on Gallant Fox. Sande, seeing Workman's plight, knew he had the 13 to 10 shot beaten, but the game Whichone was still running. Gallant Fox, however, was always the horse to beat his field rather than to run in fast time. One of the great money-winners of the turf, he never achieved an important record. He ran only fast enough to win, and this day he ran only fast enough to beat Whichone.

Sande was paying no mind to anything else in the field. Jim Dandy was far back in the ruck, but he was charging. And when Whichone carried Gallant Fox wide he was literally running interference for Jim Dandy who galloped through the opening and drew even with Gallant Fox. From that point it was no contest, all Jim Dandy.

Gallant Fox had used himself up in the furious pace-setting duel with Whichone, and Jim Dandy was just beginning to run in the dash for the wire. It wasn't even close—Jim Dandy by six lengths and laughing. That was the 1930 Travers, the living lie to the crack that you haven't got a chance.

Seeded Players In Semifinals Of Parks Tennis

Ritzenberg and Turner, D. C. Players, Defeated In Doubles Tourney

By the Associated Press

New York, Aug. 18.—The semifinal round of the National Public Parks tennis championships was completed today when three seeded players, led by Leonard Hartman, of New York, No. 3 in the draw, joined unseeded Phil Rubel, of New York, in the round of four. Rubel made the grade yesterday.

BARNETT

Hartman advanced at the expense of Sumner Rodman, eighth - seeded Bostonian, 6—0, 7—5, 8—6. He will meet Rubel tomorrow. In the upper bracket, David Perchonock, of Philadelphia, No. 5, defeated Lou Faquin, of Memphis, 4—6, 6—3, 10—12, 6—2, 6—2, and Seymour Greenberg, of Chicago, No. 4, conquered Nat Goldstein, of New York, 6—3, 6—2, 5—7, 6—3.

Unseeded Marta Barnett, of Miami, reached the semifinal of the women's tournament with a 6—2, 6—0 victory over Second-Seeded Helen Germaine, of New York, champion in 1932. Miss Barnett had won two previous matches at love. She will meet Fourth-Seeded Mrs. Merciena Parker, of St. Louis, who advanced yesterday.

Top-Seeded Mrs. Marjorie Blair, of Santa Ana, Calif., who captured a semifinal berth yesterday, will face Mrs. Alice McDonald, of Chicago, seeded No. 3, who today prevailed over Mrs. Virginia Dueker, of St. Louis 1930 champion, 3—6, 6—1, 6—2.

The top-ranked Los Angeles tandem of Julius Heldman and Willis Anderson gained the doubles semifinal by defeating Don and Robert Hume, of Brooklyn, 6—3, 6—2, 6—2. Along with them in the upper bracket went the Chicago pair, Eugene Quinn and Herbert Mertz, who turned back Allie Ritzenberg and William Turner, of Washington, 6—1, 6—1, 5—7, 6—2.

No-hit, No-run Game

Campbell Boat Hits 134 M.P.H. In Test Run

New World Record Prevented When Water Intake Clogs

By Drew Middleton.

Associated Press Sports Writer.

Coniston, England, Aug. 18.—Sir Malcolm Campbell and his latest Bluebird skimmed over Lake Coniston today at a record-breaking pace of 134 miles an hour in "just a warmup" for an effort to kite the water speed mark to around 150 miles an hour.

With a seven-year-old "test engine," Campbell guided the Bluebird II over the measured mile in 26.7 seconds, faster than man ever traveled before on water and 3.07 miles an hour faster than Campbell's listed world's record of 130.93 miles an hour.

Only the worst kind of luck prevented the 51-year-old speed specialist from smashing the record today. Circling to return over the measured mile—a trip each way being necessary to establish a record—he noticed his engine was near the explosion point. This was due to an obstruction in the water intake.

He had the Bluebird II towed back to the boathouse and the timekeeper announced sadly that the "fastest mile" could not be considered an official record.

Campbell's big boat may beat the record next time out. He has been using the late Sir Henry Segrave's old motor, but Saturday or Sunday his mechanics will shift in the "first-string" Rolls Royce engine.

Cobb Goes 352 m.p.h. In Land Speed Test

Bonneville Salt Flats, Utah, Aug. 18 (AP).—Genial John Cobb, of London, appeared confident of cracking the existing speed records for automobiles after roaring across the salt beds at 352.94 miles an hour today in a test run that a year ago would have been acclaimed miraculous.

Weather conditions were perfect and the 13-mile salt track in fine shape as Cobb pushed his three-and-a-half ton "Railton Red Lion" almost up to the world's mark of 357.5, held by a fellow countryman, Capt. George E. T. Eyston.

"I didn't fully extend the car and I think it has the necessary speed eventually to break the record," Cobb said.

Red Sox Beat Nats Behind Ostermueller

By Shirley Povich.

Fred Ostermueller, whose ability to beat the Nats has been keeping him in the league for several years, solidified his job yesterday by beating the Nats again. Confronted with their long-time nemesis, the Nats went runless for seven innings and then surrendered a 6-2 game to the Red Sox.

They were licked before 10,000 Ladies' Day fans, and at bat they were extremely ladylike themselves. They didn't get their fourth hit of the game until the seventh inning, by which time the Red Sox had a 3-0 lead against Alex Alexandra, who was playing something of a lone hand inasmuch as the Nats were getting no runs for him.

It was the third consecutive time that Ostermueller has beaten the Nats this season, and the seventh time in his last eight starts against the Washington club. It was also Boston's sixth consecutive victory at Griffith Stadium, where they haven't lost a ball game this season.

Boston's victory enabled them to keep pace with the Yankees who were bumping off the Athletics up in the Bronx, 5 to 0, and thus maintaining a 7½ game lead.

Any ideas the Nats had of winning the game vanished in the ninth inning when the Red Sox's 3-1 lead suddenly sprouted to 6-1 proportions against the most ludicrous pitching of the season. With Alexandra having been withdrawn for a pinch-hitter in the eighth inning, Manager Bucky Harris introduced Mike Palagyi, late of the Sally League, to the big leagues, and regretted it almost instantly.

Palagyi had a horrible time of it locating the plate. He walked the first batter to face him, and then he hit Jimmy Foxx on the back with his next pitch. Then he walked Williams to fill the bases, and then he walked Cronin to force home a

Haynes and Chase Hurl Twin Bill For Nats Today

Joe Haynes and Ken Chase will attempt to halt the indignities suffered by the Nats at the hands of the Red Sox when they oppose the Boston club in a double-header at Griffith Stadium today.

Haynes turned in a creditable effort against the Red Sox in Boston last week despite a defeat. In his last Start, Ken Chase was beaten by the Yankees after pitching a six-hit game in which a wild pitch contributed to his downfall in the tenth inning.

The Red Sox will take Emerson Dickman off the relief roles to send him against the Nats in one of the games of the twin bill, but Joe Cronin is undecided on his second-game pitcher with evidence pointing to Elden Auker.

Ruffing Wins 18th as Yanks Beat A's, 5-0

Champs' 5th Straight; Four New York Runs Result of Homers

By the Associated Press

New York, Aug. 18.—The Yankees hit the "numbers" today with Red Ruffing taking advantage of the date to win his eighteenth game.

The score against the Philadelphia Athletics was 5 to 0. It was New York's fifth straight victory, Ruffing's fifth shutout, and he allowed five hits.

Four of the champions' runs came through homers. In the fourth inning Bill Dickey slapped his eighteenth behind Joe DiMaggio's double and in the sixth George (Twink) Selkirk notched his nineteenth after Dickey had walked.

New York's other run came in the seventh on singles by Red Rolfe and DiMaggio.

All of these runs were scored against Henry Pippen, who also was in trouble in the fifth when two walks and a single loaded the bases. Bill Beckman pitched the eighth

Cardinals Win 17th Victory in 19 Games

By the Associated Press

Pittspurgh, Aug. 18.—The flying St. Louis Cardinals won their seventeenth victory in 19 games today, 3-to-0, behind the airtight hurling of young Bob Bowman, who handed the hapless Pittsburgh Pirates their tenth consecutive defeat, one less than the season's record made earlier by Philadelphia.

The Cards, who swept the four-game series here in three days, left tonight to open a crucial series with the league-leading Reds in Cincinnati, whose margin they have slashed to 5½ games.

The game was close throughout but St. Louis actually won it before the second out. Pepper Martin, playing third base, doubled. After Jimmy Brown went out, Pepper galloped home on the first of Enos Slaughter's three singles. When Johnny Mize also singled, Pie Traynor, fast-graying Pirate manager, yanked Russ Bauers for Joe Bowman. Ducky Medwick, returning after several days' rest due to an injury, then bounced into a double play.

While Bob Bowman was mowing the Pirates down, his rampaging teammates added a run in the fourth when Medwick singled, moved to third on Don Padgett's one-baser and counted as Moor was forcing Padgett. They added another needless marker in the ninth. Slaughter singled, moved to third on Mize's second hit and counted on Medwick's sacrifice fly.

Masked General Escapes Acid Thrower, Wins at Spa

By the Associated Press

Saratoga Springs, Aug. 18.—After escaping serious injury en route to the race track paddock when an unidentified man threw acid on his back, Masked General, 5-year-old gelding from the Brandywine Stable of Donald P. Ross, of Delaware, today won the thirty-seventh Delaware Handicap.

As the favorite was being led across Union avenue from the Oklahoma training track to the paddock, his assailant approached and threw the acid. Masked General suffered a couple of blisters on his rump and part of his tail was burned, but the track veterinarian pronounced him fit to start the race.

There were only three starters after Arnold Hanger's He Did was scratched, and Masked General was made a 2-to-7 favorite. He didn't win as easily as his backers expected, however, for Gegore D. Widener's Birch Rod held on for 7 furlongs before dropping back to finish two lengths behind. Mrs. Louise Viau's Conquer was third, another three lengths back.

The winner ran the mile in 1:38 2-5 to win $2,750.

R. S. Walters' Royalty II Wins Berryville Hunter Title

Two Ribbons On Final Day Gain Award

Favored Sally Port Takes Reserve; Jumping Honors Go to Billy Do

By Anne Hagner

Berryville, Va., Aug. 18.—Berryville's home talent came in for a surprise defeat in the closing stages of the Clarke County Horse Show today, when Robert S. Walters' Royalty II, recently bought from Ernest L. Redmon, of Middleburg, added two more blue ribbons to his collection and was awarded the hunter championship.

The tricolor award, second in the past month for the striking bay gelding, placed Royalty over Mr. and Mrs. George P. Greenhalgh's Sally Port, who looked like a cinch to be the ultimate champion during yesterday's show. However, the Berryville-owned stable did emerge with the open jumping championship, which was taken by Billy Do, Springsbury's topflight hunter-jumper. The dark brown gelding, probably the most popular horse to appear on the Virginia circuit in recent years, was never in better form as Rider Shirley Payne took him over countless stiff fences.

Billy Do's winning the jumper award and Sally Port the reserve hunter ribbon was directly in reverse of last week's Bath County Horse Show at Hot Springs, when Sally Port took the hunter tricolor and her illustrious stablemate was reserve jumper champion to Mrs. W. Haggin Perry's big fencing artist, Santa Claus.

Anderson Rides Well

Royalty II's well-earned victory, after superlative rides all day by Frost Anderson, was a fine talking point for the fast-increasing group of Virginians who maintain that a half-bred horse may be as fine a hunter type as a thoroughbred. Royalty is by the thoroughbred stallion, War Whoop, out of a three-quartered mare named Royal Rose, and is one of the best 4-year-olds now showing in the Old Dominion. Today's triumph comes as a climax to the number of championships won by cold-blooded horses this season, notable Miss Pat, Horace Moffett's Upperville champion, and Royalty's victory at last month's Washington, Va., show, and at other highly regarded equine events last season.

In the jumper division, W. B. Bogert's game mare, Gay Cockade, which has been successfully campaigned from Maine to Florida, took the reserve award with Malvern Bell in the saddle. Bell won his ribbon the hard way, usually by jumping off in each class with his other mount, the 22-year-old Hobo, who closely pursued Gay Cockade during both days of strenuous jumping. At the end of the show young Bell jogged into the ring a weary picture of wornout horseman, after bouncing off Gay Cockade on the outside course early in the day and hitting the dust with Hobo in the knockdown-and-out. The last spill looked bad to the spectators, but neither horse nor rider was injured.

Most notable fact of the early morning session was the victory of the Greenhalghs' Port o' War in the class for thoroughbred yearlings. The brown mare is a full sister to Sally Port, ace Greenhalgh youngster, and is almost a replica of her.

Higbe Beats Giants for Phillies, 5-2

Third Victory This Season Over New York; Bill Lohrman Chased

Philadelphia, Aug. 18 (AP).—Kirby Higbe continued his hex over the New York Giants today with a five-hit pitching performance which brought the Phillies a 5-to-2 victory in their series opener.

Last week at New York Higbe stuffed a two-hitter down the Giants and earlier in the season he beat them for the Chicago Cubs.

The Phils plastered five hits on Bill Lohrman in the first inning to take a three-run lead and were given another run in the second when Relief Pitcher Manny Salvo walked Morrie Arnovich with the bases jammed. A double by Arnovich and George Scharein's single added the other tally in the fifth.

A walk and two singles gave the Giants a run in the second and Harry Danning homered in the fourth.

Al Ritzenberg Top-Seeded in Gov't Tennis

Tourney Opens Today On Potomac Park Courts at 2 P. M.

Allie Ritzenberg, defending champion, and Ray Stocklinski, runner-up in last year's tournament, have been seeded one and two in the Government Tennis tournament which opens at 2 o'clock this afternoon on the Potomac Park courts.

Seeded behind Ritzenberg and Stocklinski are C. Alphonso Smith, who probably would be top-seeded if this were not his first try in the tournament; Austin Rice, Tom Mangan, Edward Mather, Neil Lindjem and Deane Judd.

1:30 p. m.—Everett Burke vs. F. M. Silva. 2 p. m.—C. Alphonso Smith vs. Henry Sweeney; Hays Haymaker vs. B. L. Miller; Harry Kitchener vs. John Andary; Byron E. Haser vs. John R. Smith; Deane Judd vs. Harry Goldsmith; Max Bost vs. Oscar Steinhauser; Robert Burgess vs. John Doyle; Tom Mangan vs. W. T. Livingston; J. Wilson Reed vs. Harold Jaffee.

'Flying Horseman' Off for English Hunting Event

Baltimore, Aug. 18 (AP).—Harvey S. Ladew, sportsman, left for New York tonight to complete the second leg of his plan to go fox hunting on both sides of the Atlantic Ocean within 72 hours.

The "flying horseman" rode with the Elkridge-Harford hounds earlier today on a cubbing hunt. He will leave New York on the Yankee Clipper flying to England tomorrow morning.

Friends have arranged for him to hunt with a pack in the English Shires Monday, completing his fox-hunting "double."

True-Blu Ten Favored Over Jimmy's Today

Game Is Feature of Opening Schedule Of District Softball Championship Series At Eastern Stadium; 3 Other Contests

Jimmy's Northeast Restaurant, last of the eleven competing teams to qualify for the District softball championships, seems destined to be the first eliminated today as the series to determine the city's representative in the National Amateur championships at Chicago begins at Eastern Stadium.

Jimmy's, which won the Sherwood League title in a deciding play-off with Kavakos Grill Friday, faces the tournament favorite, Tru-Blu, at 3:30 in one of four games scheduled. The chief reason Jimmy's is not expected to upset the Metro Night League champions is Abe Rosenfield, Tru-Blu's great pitcher and one of the outstanding figures of local softball.

The honor of actually launching the tournament will fall to the teams playing at 2:30—Carr and Boswell, of the Prince Georges County League vs. Maritime Commission, and Carley's, of the Regal League vs. Plaza Wine & Liquor, of the Sunday Morning Sports Center League.

Sharing the spotlight at 3:30 with Tru-Blu and Jimmy's will be Patent Office, the team which upset Tru-Blu in the quarter-final round last year, and Taft-Burroughs, champion of the Taft-Burroughs Playground League.

Paul Grace, former Gonzaga Prep athlete and one of the most improved young softball pitchers in town, will oppose Rosenfield and his Tru-Blu mates who will be handicapped by the absence of their hard-hitting first baseman, "Tucker" Woodward, who is injured.

Harold Steffes, Martime Commission's sensational submarine ball artist, is scheduled to take the mound for the Government boys probably against Temple Jarrell who has helped Carr and Boswell compile a record of 43 victories and only seven losses this season.

2:30—Carr and Boswell vs. Maritime Commission; Carley's vs. Plaza Wine & Liquor.

Betty Meckley Wins Shawnee Golf Crown

D. C. Player Defeats Mrs. Harvey Mack For 8 and 7 Triumph

Special Dispatch to The Post

Shawnee on Delaware, Pa., Aug. 18.—Mrs. Betty Meckley, former Washington City champion, today annexed the Shawnee Women's Golf championship with an 8 and 7 victory over Mrs. Harvey Mack, of Easton, Pa.

Mrs. Meckley, who on Monday captured the medal with a brilliant 80, played even better golf today in defeating the Pennsylvania veteran. After clicking off even par for the first 7 holes, she made her only mistake of the day on the eighth. Here she hit her second shot into a trap to the right of the green and her 5 was one shot too many to halve Mrs. Mack, who was down in a par 4. Betty won the eighth with a par 4.

Mrs. Meckley was out in 38, one over men's par and 7 up at the point. The tenth was halved in par 5's and on the eleventh the Washington star hit the best shot of the match. After Mrs. Mack had hit her second shot 15 feet from the pin, Mrs. Meckley knocked a spoon shot out of the rough to within 3 feet of the hole. She holed and Mrs. Mack missed and the match was over.

Mrs. Meckley has decided not to compete in the Women's National next week at Noroton, Conn., but Mrs. Bishop Hill, of Washington, who she defeated yesterday in the semifinals, left today for the tournament.

Heurich Beats IDRA, 7-1, in Title Series

Losers Eliminated From Tourney by 2d Defeat in Row

Backing up Walter James' clever 11-hit pitching with two timely double plays, the Heurich Brewers defeated I. D. R. A., 7-1, on the East Ellipse yesterday in the city-wide sandlot series to determine Washington's entry in the National Amateur Federation Baseball Tournament here next month. Darkness halted play in the first half of the ninth.

The defeat was I. D. R. A.'s second in three days and the Interior League champions became the first team to be eliminated in the double-knockout series.

Jake Farrell, I. D. R. A. third baseman, was injured in a fifth-inning collision with George Knepley, of Heurich, and was taken to Emergency Hospital. It was feared he suffered several fractured ribs.

The game was a pitchers' duel for three innings between James and I. D. R. A.'s slender right-hander, Bill Liggett, who went the route and gave up 11 hits. In the fourth inning, however, Heurich got busy and scored three runs on a single by Barry, a triple by Stahl, which was misplayed by Outfielder Harvey, a walk to Cabell, a single by Shelton and Sullivan's sacrifice fly to leftfield.

I. D. R. A.'s only run came in the sixth. Jewett beat out a perfect bunt and Harvey doubled, moving him to third. Coe looped a short fly to Barry in centerfield and Harvey was doubled off second. Fones then singled to bring Jewett home.

Foreign Final At Brookline Now Probable

Australians Defeat Parker and McNeill In Four Easy Sets

By the Associated Press

Brookline, Mass., Aug. 18.—The Men's National Doubles Tennis Tournament appeared headed for the first all-foreign final in its 58-year history tonight after Jack Crawford and Harry Hopman, of Australia, disposed of the top-ranking homebreds, Frank Parker and Don McNeill, with the greatest of ease in the semifinals.

All that is necessary to turn this classic into an Australian Davis Cup team workout is to have Adrian Quist and Jack Bromwich, its aces, triumph over Bobby Riggs and Elwood Cooke, the Wimledon champions, tomorrow. That assignment was not regarded as difficult for the visiting stars.

Crawford and Hopman foiled Parker and McNeill at every turn as they swept to a 6—4, 4—6, 6—3, 6—2 victory.

First Attempt Fails

The American youngsters, whose attack is much more brainy than brawny, realized at the outset that they had to keep the Australians away from the net if they were to win.

Their first attempt, driving back the opposition with volleys and lobs, failed because they were unable to keep the ball inside the baselines, and when they came to grips at close quarters, Crawford and Hopman generally managed to keep the ball in play until they sliced off a placement or forced an error.

Hopman was a pillar of strength throughout the match. He not only was able to handle everything that came his way, but when Parker and McNeill tried to throw all of their pressure against Crawford, he came to the rescue and made up for a good share of the 40 errors Crawford made.

Hopman limited his miscues to 29, and they made 51 earned points, most of them angled placements.

Parker and McNeill piled up a total of 81 errors against 39 earned points, but the latter's inability to hold more than five of his nine service games caused their downfall and with it, very likely, their hopes for a Davis Cup appointment as a unit.

The outlook in the women's division, from a national standpoint, was much brighter, for Mrs. Sarah Palfrey Fabyan, of Brookline, and Alice Marble, of Beverly Hills, Calif., winners for the past two years, gained the final with an easy 6—3, 6—1 win over Mrs. Dorothy Andrus, of Stamford, Conn., and Mme. Sylvia Henrotin, of France.

They are almost prohibitive favorites to overcome the winners of the other semifinal, between Kay Stammers and Mrs. Freda James Hammersley, of England, and Helen Jacobs, of Berkeley, Calif., and Dorothy Workman, of Los Angeles, in Sunday's windup.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, Aug. 18.—How the mighty have fallen, to coin an intricate phrase. Johnstown, hailed only a few short weeks ago as the wonder horse of the times, will go to the post tomorrow in Saratoga's famed old Travers Stakes—and he won't be the favorite.

CONSIDINE

The big Woodward colt, who was something less than even money to win the Kentucky Derby this year—and as low as 1 to 8 in several of his subsequent starts around New York—has been named only as second choice by several prominent handicappers. Their first choice is Eight Thirty, G. D. Widener's vastly improved 3-year-old. Most of them fell in love with Eight Thirty after his fine victory in the Wilson Stakes, in which he lifted 118 pounds and ran a lot of older horses dizzy—including Pompoon and Fighting Fox.

The experts began to fall out of love with Johnstown shortly before Big John was shipped to Chicago for the Arlington classic. Several rail birds, watching the colt's fine morning workouts, reported that they heard him wheezing as if he has a bag of whistles caught in his throat—as he passed them on the bends. Ten Big John took a humiliating beating in the big race, folding badly in the stretch.

Always the Threat of an Outsider

The Travers may well clarify the now muddled 3-year-old championship. Challedon isn't in there so there will be no crowns officially presented. But if Eight Thirty can do what a pretty solid bank of experts believe he can do, the 3-year-old title might have to go to the winner of an Eight Thirty-Challedon gallop. Unless of course Johnstown improves. Not even old Jim Fitzsimmons, who has practically slept with him since he was a yearling, knows just what Big John is going to do tomorrow.

If some unwashed plug like Sir Marlboro comes along to win the Travers, at 50 or 100 to 1, it will be no great shock to old gaffers who have watched this particular classic. In the 1928 renewal which brought together Reigh Count and Victorian in a race that was virtually a match engagement, a flea bag named Petee Wrack slopped home ahead of both of them. Two years later the Travers was to be the great toe-to-toe fight for the championship between Gallant Fox and Whichone. But Jim Dandy, his withers itching for a milkwagon tongue, skidded home in front.

There is not much doubt that a lot of money and considerable care have been lavished on Johnstown since he was revealed as possessed of a little wheeze along with his considerable breeze.

Loss Still Event for Johnstown

That the vets and equine bedside sitters are stumped seems obvious, for all public utterances from Fitzsimmons and Woodward are filled with ifs and buts. Of course it's asking a lot of any colt to win every time out, but a Johnstown loss is an event—particularly for anyone who saw him leap out of the gate like Pegasus to win the Derby and the other big ones.

It was on the same Saratoga track, just 20 years ago this week, that what has since been called the greatest upset of them all took place. That was the day Upset, owned by H. P. Whitney and trained by Jim Rowe, beat Man o' War. And yet an inspection of the journals of that day show at the time it happened it wasn't regarded as the calamitous occasion it now is.

Upset, so perfectly named, was the only horse ever to beat Man o' War. Big Red won 20 of the 21 races of his career, and later on he beat Upset but as long as the name of Man o' War is mentioned, someone will always remember his one loss.

The defeat of Man o' War wasn't held to be a tragedy, the day after it happened, because it was only the third race of his career and his first in good company.

Bees Defeat Dodgers, 4 to 3, With Unearned Run in 14th

By the Associated Press

Boston, Aug. 18.—An unearned run in the fourteenth inning brought the Boston Bees a 4-to-3 victory over the Brooklyn Dodgers today and ended abruptly a game that might have equaled their notable 23-inning tie of June 27.

After six scoreless innings Boston placed the winning run on base in the fourteenth when the usually dependable Johnny Hudson fumbled Rabbit Warstler's easy grounder and then threw the ball into the Dodgers' dugout to let Warstler reach second. Pinch-hitter Al Lopez was purposely passed and Pitcher Joe Sullivan's bunt was allowed to roll fair, filling the bases. Then Pinch-hitter Al Simmons sent a sacrifice fly to deep center to score Warstler and end the game.

Sullivan went the route with a smart ten-hit hurling job. The Dodgers' first run in the first inning rivaled the Bees' finisher. Harry Lavagetto beat out a bunt, took second when Henry Majeski threw into rightfield and scored when Debs Garms scooped up the ball and threw it back to leftfield.

The Bees nibbled a run in the second, fourth and sixth innings off Fred Fitzsimmons, but were held in check until the fourteenth by Ira Hutchinson after Fitz was lifted in the seventh for Pinch-hitter Tuck Stainback, who singled in two runs to tie the score.

Johnstown, Eight Thirty Co-favorites in Travers Today

Five Entries Named for Famed Stake

Big John's Condition Question Mark Today In 70th Running; Expect 2-Horse Race

By the Associated Press

Saratoga Springs, N. Y., Aug. 18

Saratoga Springs, N. Y., Aug. 18.—For the first time since he came of age, there existed a "betting" doubt tonight, on the eve of the ancient Travers Stake as to Johnstown's right to the throne of the 3-year-old racing empire.

Until now, every time William Woodward's Big John went to the post this year, you were likely to get no more than 50 cents on the dollar from the bookies or the machines, but the presence of Eight Thirty, late-coming surprise package of the year's campaigning in tomorrow's seventieth running of the Travers, along with the question mark concerning Johnstown's conditon, made the big, handsome bay no better than cochoice at 6 to 5 tonight.

Only Five Entries

Only five entries were filed today for the 3-year-old classic mile and a quarter, but the there optimists who elected to go with the big pair might just as well have "stood in bed," if you listened to the clubhouse conversation at this picturesque racing strip.

No one gave Mrs. Payne Whitney's Hash, Conny Smythe's Sir Marlboro or Sun Lover, from the M. L. Emerich-Tony Pelleteri Millsdale Stable, a look in.

Despite the fact that history shows any number of upsets in this stake since it was first run during the Civil War days, all angles pointed to a two-horse race between Half Past Eight, carrying 117 pounds, and Big John, loaded with 128.

Should Johnstown's wind be sound, and he returns to the form he showed in his runaway victories in the Kentucky Derby, the Belmont, the Withers and the Wood Memorial, it's going to take a powerful lot of picking 'em up and laying 'em down to beat him.

Third to Big John

However, in George D. Widener's Eighty Thirty, the Woodward whirlwind, which, in last outing, was a disappointing third in the Arlington classic after flattening out badly in the mud of the Preakness, tangles with a colt which has been going against older horses, and whipping most of the good ones handily.

Early this year, he ran third to Johnstown in an allowance affair and eighth in the Wood Memorial, but the story goes he had a toothache then. He went to the dentist after the Wood, and since Dr. Yankem fixed him up he's been a large ball of fire. In six starts, he won five and was nosed out by Sun Lover in the other.

Johnstown's wind "affliction" has been a major mystery of late, but Trainer Sunny Jim Fitzsimmons says today the big bay is coming out of it. "He doesn't whistle until after he's worked a quarter mile," Fitz explained, "and by the time he comes back after a work, there's no sign of the whistle. Guess he's okay."

Red Sox Defeat Nationals, 6-2

run. Then he got the gate, having pitched 15 balls and thrown only two strikes.

Valiant Battle

Young Walter Masterson arrived in the box at that point and his first act was to pitch a single to Joe Vosmik, whose blow into leftfield scored the second and third runs of the inning. Masterson escaped further damage, but by that time the Sox had a five-run lead.

Alexandra was giving Ostermueller a valiant battle of it for four innings, pitching two-hit ball. He escaped trouble in the first inning when the Sox filled the bases with one out, because Buddy Lewis grabbed Joe Cronin's hot smash and converted it into a double play.

Alex threw three hitless innings at the Red Sox after that and then surrendered a single run to the Sox in the fifth, sixth and seventh. A bunt by Tabor started trouble for him in the fifth and netted the first run of the ball game a bit later when Doerr followed with a single. In the sixth Jimmy Foxx's two-bagger into th leftfield corner and Joe Cronin's single to center made it 2-0, and in the seventh Cramer's single scored Peacock, who had opened the inning with a hit to right.

West Gets Triple

Alex yielded the Red Sox 11 of their 12 hits, but he was in little danger of being blasted out of the box except in the sixth inning when Sammy West raced far, far toward the centerfield wall and grabbed a drive off the bat of Joe Vosmik with a catch that ranks with the finest ever seen in the stadium.

West was the author of the Nats' longest blow of the day—a triple into the right center corner in the third inning, but it occurred with two out and proved a wasted affair. Through the fourth, fifth and sixth, the Nats didn't even get a man on base, and in the seventh, Bloodworth's single to center with one out was put to no use when Vernon and Ferrell were easy outs.

George Case inspired the first Washington run when he doubled to center in the eighth. Buddy Lewis moved him to third with an infield out and after Sammy West drew a walk, Estalella singled to center to usher Case home. They got no more runs because Gelbert hit into a force play at third base.

The Nats packed three of their nine hits into the ninth inning in a futile sort of gesture. Bloodworth opened the inning with a single to left and after Vernon popped out, Ferrell doubled to center to score Bloodworth. Pinch Hitter Travis could deliver only a soft out to Vosmik, but George Case fanned the flame anew by beating out a bunt to Ostermueller. Buddy Lewis then obligingly flied to Cramer for the game-ending out.

Trade Volume Rises 5 to 14% Over Year Ago

Auto Sales Lead Gains With Increase of 30 To 50 Per cent

By the Associated Press

New York, Aug. 18—Retail trade was somewhat improved this week over the preceding period and wholesalers reported a better volume of re-orders, particularly for fall fashion merchandise, Dun & Bradstreet said today in their weekly review of business.

"Major lines of retail merchandise were fairly consistent in showing increases over last year, but the amount of improvement varied widely," the agency said. "Grocery sales were only fractionally ahead of 1938 while automobile totals were as much as 30 to 50 per cent better. Gains in other types of goods lay between these two extremes."

The review estimated that the increase in volume for the country as a whole ranged from 5 to 14 per cent over a year ago.

Trade sentiment was "generally cheerful" on the wholesale fronts, the review said. "Although purchasing was still being done cautiously, there was evidence of more frequent departures from hand-to-mouth buying policies in favor of a two or three month covering of requirements."

The expectation of price advances in some lines when Federal wages and hours act changes become effective in October was responsible for some of the forward buying.

Com. & Sou. to Buy $100,000 Power a Month From TVA

By the Associated Press

A spokesman said today that the Tennessee Valley Authority had signed a contract with Commonwealth & Southern Corporation to sell power to C. & S. subsidiaries in Mississippi, Alabama, Georgia and South Carolina at a total cost of approximately $100,000 a month.

This source said the contract called for 10 years of service which could be terminated, however, on 18 months notice by either party.

The deal, it was said, would not stand in the way of negotiations now afoot for TVA assistance in the purchase by public bodies of approximately $5,000,000 of Commonwealth & Southern utilities in northern sectins of Alabama and Mississippi.

TVA concluded with Commonwealth & Southern only this week a contract for the purchase of its utilities properties in Tennessee.

Building Contracts 30% Above Year Ago

New York, Aug. 18 (AP).—Building construction contracts awarded in the first seven 1939 months aggregated $1,999,247,000 in thirty-seven Eastern States, a jump of 30 per cent over the like 1938 period, F. W. Dodge Corporation reported today.

Residential contracts awarded in July, the company said, totaled $2,568,000, a decline of 2 per cent under June, but a rise of 25 per cent over July last year. July non-residential building was placed at $88,501,000, a rise of 22 per cent over July a year ago. The non-residential total included $17,404,000 of manufacturing buildings, which represented a rise of 80 per cent over factory contracts in July, 1938.

Acacia Mutual Names O. D. Heise Detroit Manager

The appointment of O. D. Heise, of the District of Columbia agency of the Acacia Mutual Life Insurance Co., as manager of the company's branch office in Detroit, Mich., was announced yesterday by William Montgomery, Acacia president. Mr. Heise will assume his new duties in Detroit on Monday.

O. D. HEISE

Mr. Heise, one of the leading producers in the Acacia home office agency in Washington since his appointment in May, 1935, has been a consistent member of the William Montgomery Quality Club and earned the vice presidency for this year.

Born in Freeport, Ill., Mr. Heise was educated in the public schools of that city and at Armour Institute, Chicago. He has lived in Washington for the past six years and is well known in local financial circles, having been associated with E. A. Pierce & Co., members of the New York Stock Exchange, in New York and in Washington.

Week's New Issues Double Year Ago

New York, Aug 18 (AP).—New security issues offered to the public during the week ended yesterday totaled $76,649,393, substantially below the unusually high volume of the previous week but almost twice as large as the same week a year ago, Poor's Publishing Co. reported today.

The amount was well distributed between municipal and various types of private financing but only about 19 per cent represented a need for new capital. The balance was accounted for by the refinancing of other obligations already in existence.

Week's Gold Imports Drop to $23,931,006

The Commerce Department reported yesterday an abrupt drop in gold imports for the week ended August 11. Imports fell off to $23,931,006 from $60,942,950 the previous week. There were no gold exports for the week ended August 11. Exports for the previous week totaled $4,653.

Silver imports increased to $1,931,512 in the week ended August 11 from $825,769 in the week ended August 4. Silver exports declined to $123,229 from $157,100 for the week ended August 4. Principal imports of gold to this country in the latest week came from the United Kingdom and the Netherlands.

Wheat Gains Despite Drop At Liverpool

Late Chicago Rise Is Credited to Short Covering Operations

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Aug. 18.—After ignoring through most of the session weakness in Liverpool wheat prices, the Chicago market turned upward just before the close today, registering fractional net gains.

Most of the buying during the late upturn was credited to short covering of previous sales, apparently because of weakness in securities which some dealers said may have been due to concern over the Eupropean political situation. Some purchasing represented removal of hedges on cash wheat or flour sales, brokers said.

Wheat closed ⅛@¾ cent higher than yesterday, orf ⅜@⅞ above the than yesterday, or ⅜@⅞ above the 66⅛, December 65½@65⅝. Corn was unchanged to ⅜ lower, September 42⅞@43, December 42⅛@42¼; oats ⅛ off to ¼ up; rye unchanged to ¼ higher and lard unchanged to 5 higher.

Wheat lost ⅜@½ cent in early dealings but steadied at around previous closing levels, refusing to follow declines at Liverpool, which at times exceeded a cent a bushel and established new all-time low records for contracts quoted there. Liverpool closed ⅜@1 cent lower.

Independent Action

Grain trade experts said this show of stubborn resistance demonstrated the independent action of domestic prices that might be expected in view of operations of the export subsidy program coupled with the wheat loan system which is causing much of the new crop to be held off the market. Illustrative of this is the fact that Liverpool October wheat closed at 50 cents, or 16 cents below Chicago September. Winnipeg October was priced at 51¾.

Weakness in Liverpool in the face of disturbing political developments was attributed to continued pressure of Argentine wheat, the increased subsidy on U. S. flour exports and the prospective subsidy program effective tomorrow.

Southern Pacific Reports Sharp Net Increase for July

New York, Aug. 18 (AP).—Southern Pacific Co., among the first of major carriers to report for July, today placed net operating income (before fixed charges and other income) at $2,353,864, compared with $1,623,394 in July last year. Gross income for the month rose to $18,394,418 from $17,048,098 a year ago.

Baltimore & Ohio

The Baltimore & Ohio Railroad reported today for the first six months of this year a net loss of $6,346,753 compared with a loss of $11,741,308 in the comparable period last year.

Louisville & Nashville

The Louisville & Nashville Railroad for the first half of 1939 showed net income of $1,373,551, equal to $1.17 a share on the common stock, against a loss of $1,125,303 in the first six months of 1938.

Missouri-Kansas-Texas

The Missouri-Kansas-Texas Railroad for six months ended June 30 reported net loss of $2,207,118 compared with a loss of $2,681,567 in the first half of last year.

Stocks Drop but Commodities Are Firm; Traders Fear Week-End Developments; Bonds Follow Stock Market Pattern

New York, Aug. 18.—Securities dipped sharply in price against a background of firmness in most commodity sections. Traders, who are largely professionals just now, seemed determined not to remain long of stocks over a week-end which might easily bring some new and more scary news from Europe. On the stock exchange prices broke more sharply than in any session since June 29, and volume increased to 836,590 shares with individual issues yielding 1 to 4 points. The composite for the 100 key stocks on the big board showed a net loss of 0.88 point, carrying the index back to the July 11 level.

With the domestic situation again adjudged fairly satisfactory, influence of events abroad continued to dominate sentiment. Accelleration of Nazi propaganda and troop movements; the resolute attitude of Polish, French and British authorities and progress in the Japanese move to isolate Hongkong in the same manner as Tientsin, were cited as indicating the fading prospect of a compromise on Danzig. Selling of stocks, whether from professional or private sources, indicated that despite the long succession of war scares the market has not developed callousness, but remains sensitive to such news.

Sterling Under Pressure

Superficially Europe was calm, but currents of apprehension were perceived through the screen of exchange controls. Sterling again was under pressure and gold in strong demand at higher prices. Guilders firmed but the reichsmark broke. While the status of the pound is not causing any anxiety at present, observers point out that it will require watching as British armament expenditures mount to the peak this fall and during the winter; and if jabs from the axis powers against Albion continue. No doubt the tripartite monetary powers are making due provision for possible increased pressure.

Trading was quiet at the opening, with share prices showing fractional declines from Thursday's close. Irregularity at the start mirrored uncertainty in London. There were, however, some strong spots in the early dealings. Gains, however, were erased before the finish.

Steel Shares Drop

Steels dipped abruptly, although operating news was good, gains in output next week being predicted for the Southern district and at Youngstown. Steel common and Bethlehem, both in the active division, lost 1⅝ each, and Republic's drop of a point was even sharper, considering its lower quotation.

In the motor section, Chrysler led the list with a loss of 1½, and General Motors gave up 1. Ward's reported assemblies at 12,855 units for the week, and estimated this would represent the low for the year and last runs on many models. The current total was under the like 1938 week for the first time this year, accounted for by an earlier start on the new models in August, 1938.

Rail Stocks Yield

Carrier shares turned down with the rest, although not many issues in the group were active. The Association of American Railroads estimated July gross for 92 roads 8.9 per cent above gross for July last year, against 22 per cent in an earlier estimate.

Copper stocks relinquished a good slice of their recent gains although demand, especially in the foreign market, was improved. Germany was reported a buyer in London and the tone of export quotations on the metal generally was firm. Seven leading copper shares showed an average loss of nearly a point each, however. Anaconda, the most active, lost only ⅜.

Allied Chemical was off more than 4, Westinghouse more than 3, Union Pacific and Johns-Manville more than 2 points while Eastman Kodak sank 5 points. General Electric, Goodyear, International Harvester, New York Central, Sears Roebuck and United States Rubber were others which lost a point or more each.

Building Gains

The F. W. Dodge Corporation reported continuation of gains in construction awards with contracts for the seven months ended July 31 estimated at 30 per cent more than for the 1938 period. The National Machine Tool Builders Association's survey disclosed that July sales to foreign countries by U. S. builders reached an all-time high, substantially above the 1928-1929 boom period. Dun's commented that while most basic business indices are at or near the year's highs, a disappointing feature of the statistical picture is weakness of commodity prices.

Oil shares were narrow and dull as buyers and sellers waited for clarification of the obscure price situation. Restoration of crude price cuts by small refiners was hailed by some as indicating a break in the deadlock involving a 15-day shutdown in most oil States east of the Rocky Mountains.

Bonds Turn Downward

Listed bonds suffered another downturn today as European reports occasioned apprehensions of early developments of a warlike nature. The precautionary liquidation was modest, but there was even less inclination to take on the commitments over the week-end, and declines ranged from fractions in high-grade investment issues, to 3 points in the more speculative bonds. Foreign issues were rather less affected than domestic bonds. Turnover only amounted to $5,380,000.

United States Treasury obligations were under mild pressure, with losses ranging from 2/32 to 13/32 point. There was less inclination than usual to take on the offerings, as the September financing is not far off. Guaranteed bonds of the farm and home corporations were idle and soft. Best rated utility, railroad and industrial bonds moved slowly lower with the tide.

Foreign Issues Lower

In the foreign section, Polish, Italian and German bonds drifted downward, but the recessions were mostly fractional. Scandinavian bonds and the British Empire issues of Canada and Australia fell slightly. The Japanese section was relatively stable. Latin-American default bonds were quiet and easy.

Medium-priced railroad issues dropped with the general market, and losses also were recorded in borderline and default rails. Local tractions continued to drop from the levels attained when terms were announced on one of the systems in the unification arrangement. Holding company and share privilege bonds fell with their related equities. Amusement, communications and other groups also receded.

Cotton Close Is 10 to 25c A Bale Higher

European Situation And Goods Market Lull Curbs Trading

By the Associated Press

New York, Aug. 18.—The cotton futures market teetered back and forth today. Price undertones were firm, however, and the list closed 2 to 5 points higher. Three factors combined to keep commitments at a minimum:

1. Rumors of what the week-end will bring in Europe;
2. Seasonal lull in cotton goods markets;
3. Approach of the heavy hedging season.

Consequently, brokers said, prices were maintained as much by the absence of aggressive selling as the few orders which appeared. Most buying occurred in the morning, coming principally from Bombay and Liverpool interests. Trade sources were also fair buyers.

Forecast for more rain in the Eastern belt—the showers moved in that direction from recently rain-plagued Alabama—was another selling check.

Worth street textile sales were estimated at considerably below production for the week. Commission men said most buyers had probably built up stocks to meet requirements for the next 60 to 90 days in the last buying move.

Oil Imports Rise Nearly 15 Per Cent During Half Year

The Commerce Department reported yesterday an increase of nearly 15 per cent in imports of crude petroleum and principal refined oils in the first six months of 1939.

The imports totaled about 30,097,000 barrels. Larger purchases of foreign crude petroleum were the main factor in the gain in imports of petroleum and products.

Imports of crude petroleum increased to 16,288,000 barrels, a gain of 3,844,000.

Streamlined Trains Win Back Travelers

New York, Aug. 18.—Railroad passenger travel in the West is at levels better than hoped for, according to Ralph Budd, president of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad.

"Our Exposition Flyer, operated jointly with the Denver & Rio Grande Western and Western Pacific railroads, has been even more successful than anticipated," he stated. "This train was initially placed in operation for the duration of the Golden Gate Exposition, but we will decide before the end of the fair whether it will be made into an all-year train. Apparently travelers to the Coast like the idea of an expedited schedule with, at the same time, a view of the mountains during the day.

"Our Zephyr trains currently are running at capacity, as they have been all year. It appears that streamliners could be used on runs on our system to bring back to the rails passenger travel which cannot be brought back any other way."

Benefit Payments To Wheat Farmers Cut 6 to 10 Cents

By the Associated Press

The Agricultural Adjustment Administration announced yesterday that wheat farmers would receive benefit payments of 18 to 22 cents a bushel for complying with the 1940 crop control program.

This is from 6 to 10 cents a bushel less than payments of 28 cents on the 1939 crop. Officials explained that the national wheat acreage allotment of 62,000,000 acres for next year was larger than this year's allotment of 55,000,000 acres, thus causing the reduced payments.

The benefit payments are based on normal yield on acreage allotments to the individual farmers.

The AAA said that the 18 to 22 cent range included both conservation and price adjustment payments from the $725,000,000 provided by Congress for payments on wheat, corn, cotton, tobacco and rice.

Two Corporation Vote Extra Dividends

New York, Aug. 18 (AP).—Directors of the Liquid Carbonic Corporation manufacturers of soda fountain supplies and equipment, have declared an extra dividend of 20 cents a share on the common stock in addition to the regular quarterly payment of 20 cents, both payable September 26 to holders of record September 11.

An extra of 25 cents was paid last September.

Directors of the May Hosiery Mills, Burlington, N. C., voted a payment of 25 cents a share in addition to the regular quarterly dividend of 50 cents a share on the class A common stock, payable September 1 to holders of record August.

NLRB Burden On Employers Will Continue

No Important Relief Expected by Business During Next Year

New York, Aug. 18—"No major relief from the burdens imposed upon employers by the National Labor Relations act can be confidently expected by business next year," the Standard Statistics Co., says today. "Practical political considerations dictate that a conservative view be taken toward potential amendments. Congress will probably enact some revisions, but they are likely to be disappointing to those prepared for a really constructive overhauling as a restult of the hearings next month by the House Committee appointed to investigate the Wagner act and the National Labor Relations Board.

"Quite obviously, the make-up of the committee is of more importance than the points which it is charged to investigate. With two members apparently critical of the NLRB, two apparently in sympathy with it, and one with no labor record (although he served for years as an AFL labor counsel), the makeup of the committee is such as to insure that it will be no whitewashing venture.

One-Sided Operation

"No unbiased investigation of the NLRB and the Wagner act can fail to come to the conclusion that both the law itself and its administration have been decidedly one-sided in operation. Congress, of course, intended that the law should provide advantages for the employe, but it is very doubtful if the legislators realized just how much the employer would be penalized—how he would be deprived of common law rights and be placed at the mercy of labor organizers. Even the liberalized Supreme Court recognized the injustices that developed under the law when it ruled against the NLRB in several cases last spring.

"The NLRB itself cannot physically hear or decide all the cases brought up. It must rely upon the findings of its trial examiners. Until these findings are kept within the scope of the law, there will be no improvement in the present one-sided situation.

Foreign Markets

London, Aug 18 (AP).—Last day of the current account in the stock market found buyers reluctant to open fresh commitments, especially in view of the grave view most took of the new Danzig crisis. British funds fell back, mostly on continental selling. Domestic rails were again depressed by wage disputes while industrials, where changed, declined narrowly. Firmness of the raw metal price helped coppers, and rubbers recovered early losses following a boost in the commodity. Transatlantics were narrowly irregular.

Paris.—Price fluctuations flattened out in the Bourse today as trading came almost to a full stop. Political considerations were held without influence. Mid-month carryover statistics showed that brokers had 1,168,000,000 francs in long accounts, a record low. Short accounts were about unchanged at 389,000,000 francs. (Carryover figures correspond roughly to brokers' loans in Wall Street.)

Liverpool.—Wheat figures plunged to the lowest levels since 1893 today under heavy general liquidation inspired by active offerings of cash grain and the increased U. S. flour export subsidy rate. Final prices were down ⅝ to ¾ penny. Cotton advanced 2 points as trade price fixing and Bombay buying absorbed light offerings.

Boston Wool Market

Boston, Aug. 18 (AP).—(United States Department of Agriculture) Demand for wool was very slow in Boston today. Occasional sales of good French combing length, fine, territory wools in original bags were made at 87 to 89 cents, scoured basis. Average to short French combing wools in original bags moved at 84 to 86 cents. Country packed bright fleece wools of ⅜ and ½ blood grade were offered occasionally at 32 cents, in the grease, but users were apparently not interested in purchasing at this price.

50 Navy Boats In Annapolis Regatta Today

200 Entrants Begin Competition in Annual Sailing Regatta

By the Associated Press

Annapolis, Md., Aug. 18.—Sportsmen-sailors from Chesapeake Bay ports, New Jersey, Virginia and the District of Columbia assembled here tonight for the fourth annual regatta of the Annapolis Yacht Club to be held tomorrow and Sunday.

Two hundred entrants, ranging from moth boats to ocean racers, will compete in 43 sailing events. They will race over three courses, one of 18 miles, one of 4½ miles and the third 2½ miles.

In addition to the local sailing fleet, the Naval Academy has entered 50 boats to be manned by midshipmen. The entire six-meter racing fleet of the Gibson Island Yacht Club will go over the starting line. From the West River Yacht Club 40 craft will stage a special race of their own to the regatta course, before entering the competition.

Every sailing class has been filled. William H. Labrot, race committee chairman, said the turnout of ocean going yachts to race over the longer course in the Chesapeake Bay, has been larger than was expected.

Forty-six prizes will be awarded to first, second and third place winners. Gov. Herbert R. O'Conor, and Senator George Radcliffe will assist Commodore Peter H. Magruder in the presentation at 4 p. m. Sunday.

The Coast Guard cutter Calypso arrived here tonight for use as the official race committee boat. Other committee boats will patrol the three courses.

2 Baltimore Players Gain Tennis Final

By the Associated Press

Oakland, Md., Aug. 18.—An all-Baltimore final for the Western Maryland men's championship was assured today when the Baltimore city champion, Nate Askin, bombed Ed Alcorn, of Pittsburgh, out of the tourney with a 6—1, 6—4, 6—3 win in the semifinals.

Askin will meet Price Colvin, Baltimore municipal champion, in the finals tomorrow. Askin was seeded third and Colvin fourth.

Colvin and John H. Beck reached one finals bracket in the men's doubles, where they will meet Frank G. Roberts and Alex Keiles, also of Baltimore, for the cup tomorrow.

Colvin-Beck took a 6—4, 6—1 win from the Cambridge team of William Harrington and James Busick after defeating Paul Sullivan and Joe Kristufek, of Pittsburgh, 4—6, 6—3, 6—0. Roberts-Keiles trimmed Askin and Jack Sopher, 7—5, 6—4, in their semifinal round.

Dolly Harris and Joy Hartman, of Pittsburgh, reached the women's doubles finals, defeating Mrs. Wright Hugus and Dorothy Boll, of Wheeling, 6—4, 6—1. They will meet the winner of match between Mrs. Naomi Thompson, of Washington, Pa., and William Rixey, of Washington, D. C., vs. Hazel Bishoff and Charlotte Decker, of Washington.

The A's gestured threatingly in the second stanza when Dick Siebert's single, Sam Chapman's double and an intentional pass to Bill Nagel filled the bases. But Ruffing tossed out Pippen and afterward Ruffing kept the Athletics hog-tied.

Man of the Month

By Walter Johnson.

(Following each game by The Washington Club, Walter Johnson distributes among the Nats ten points of merit, based on their performances for the day. At the end of each month, the Washington player boasting the greatest number of points is designated as the Nats' "Man of the Month" and receives a trophy from The Washington Post.)

Sammy West was the outstanding performer yesterday among the six Nats who merit Man of the Month points on their play against the Red Sox. Points were distributed as follows:

To West, three points, because his third-inning triple was the longest blow of the game and because he averted a big inning by the Red Sox with his fancy catch of Joe Vosmik's drive in the sixth.

To Rick Ferrell, two points, because he made two of the Nats' hits and drove in a run with a two-bagger.

To Bobby Estalella, two points, because he drove in the Nats' first run with a hit that cut Boston's lead to 3-1.

To George Case, one point, because he doubled and beat out a bunt, scoring a run.

To Jimmy Bloodworth, one point, because he made two of the Nats' hits.

Jimmy Bloodworth	25	Bobby Estalella	9
Buddy Lewis	23	Charley Gelbert	7
Dutch Leonard	17	Mickey Vernon	6
George Case	13	Angelo Giuliani	5
Sammy West	10	Alex Alexandra	5

Eastern Shore Swim on Today

Oxford, Md., Aug. 18 (AP).—Boys and girls from six counties will compete tomorrow in the first annual Eastern Shore championship swimming meet sponsored by the Red Cross and the WPA recreation committee.

Entries from Kent, Queene Annes, Wicomico, Dorchester, Caroline and Talbot counties will vie in races, life-saving exhibitions and diving contests. Each county, with Kent and Queene Annes represented jointly, will enter a team in the relay event.

W. H. Marshall, Oxford instructor in charge of the meet, will send the first competitors off at 2:30 p. m. Judges will be Gordon A. Stone and Grant McCubbin. The starter will be Dr. Louis S. Welty, Talbot County health officer.

R.-M. A. Grid Drills Begin On Sept. 14

Front Royal, Va., Aug. 18.—In announcing the football schedule of Randolph-Macon Academy for 1939, Capt. George W. Riddick, director of athletics, stated that the football Cadets will report for practice on September 14, a week before the opening of the session.

Five of last year's letter men will return to form the nucleus of the Yellow Jackets' eleven. They are Rowland Hill, of Orange, Va., and Bob Schwartz, of Drexel Hill, Pa., who are cocaptains; Ike Dees, of Fremont, N. C.; Hartley Stirling, of Drexel Hill, Pa., and Claude Garber, of Harrisonburg, Va. All are line men except Schwartz. Other players of last year's squad, who will fight for starting positions, are Frank Etzler, of Washington, D. C.; John John, of Marlintown, W. Va.; Harry and Lawrence Falck, of Pittsburgh, Pa.; Buddy Rochelle, of Durham, N. C.; Alfred Darte, of Forty-Fort, Pa.; Harley Moore, of Syracuse, N. Y.; Jay Shannabarger and Frank Hamilton, of Morgantown, W. Va., and C. A. Wallin, of Raleigh, N. C.

Capt. Riddick will directed the back field and Capt. George H. Dent will have charge of the line.

Following is the schedule:

September 30—Strasburg High School, home.

October 7—Fishburne Military School, away; 14—Episcopal High School, away; 21—Christ Church School, home; 28—Woodberry Forest School, away.

November 4—Randolph-Macon College Freshmen (homecoming day), home; 11—Luray High School, home; 18—Virginia Episcopal School, home; 28—Woodrow Wilson High School, home.

Three Virginia Golf Tourneys Begin Monday

Richmond, Va., Aug. 18.—Three State-wide golf tournaments and a number of city tourneys will give some active campaigning in Virginia tournament golf this fall after a lull since the closing of the State amateur last June.

The State tourneys will begin Monday with the father and son event at the Hermitage Country Club here. Earl Morgan, sr., and jr., of Lexington, will be defending the title they won on the same course last year.

Another tourney on the State list is the $1,000 Blue Hills Open scheduled at the Blue Hills Golf Club in Roanoke on September 8, 9 and 10. This tourney, open to both pro and amateur, is expected to attract some leading pros, including Sammy Snead, Clayton Heafner, Bobby Cruickshank, Errie Ball and Chandler Harper.

The third of the State-wide tourneys will be the newest addition to the Virginia State Golf Association's program, the State golf team tournament, which is also scheduled in Richmond in September. Officials said they expected 15 to 20 clubs will be represented by six-man teams.

Martinsburg High Meets St. Marys

Martinsburg, W. Va., Aug. 18.—St. Mary's High, of Pleasants County, W. Va., will meet Martinsburg High here in football for the first time this year, filling the locals' 1939 card, Coach John Cobourne said today.

St. Mary's, from a town of 2,000, with a high school enrollment of 500, is coached by a friend, William Klug, of Cobourne who was instrumental in scheduling the game, it was stated.

Another feature of the season this year will be staging of a night game.

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

A hand that aided materially the fine scores achieved by Robert Appleyard and Harry Fishbein, winners of the masters' pair championship, and Oswald Jacoby, partnered with the trophy donor, Baron Waldemar von Zedtwitz, is discussed today.

The hand is a spectacular slam hand, which Fishbein made when he used a safety play, refusing a finesse, and was rewarded by catching a singleton king and winning an extra trick. It required careful handling; the slightest slip by Fishbein was likely to result in defeat. The unusual bidding by which they reached the slam is shown along with the cards in today's box. Fishbein's fine play follows:

The queen of spades was led, which he took with the ace in dummy. He next played the club ace and pushed the club queen through South, the king covering. The club was trumped and a low heart, not the queen, was played to dummy. Declarer expected to give up a trump trick, but he feared to lose a spade ruff to North, if South won the first trump finesse and returned the suit. On the low lead the heart king obligingly dropped. Now Fishbein played the club jack, South ruffed with the ten and he overruffed in his own hand. A low heart lead to the board, pulling South's last trump, and the clubs were good for three discards. After getting rid of his losing spade Fishbein tried the diamond finesse and it held, giving him an extra trick.

The Federal Diary

By The Diarist

An independent Civil Service Court of Appeals and lower optional retirement age limit are being urged in resolutions prepared for the American Federation of Government Employes convention in Atlantic City next month.

Among the resolutions received at AFGE national offices is one from Navy Lodge No. 1 asking that optional retirement age be reduced to 60 years.

The establishment of a Civil Service Court of Appeals, independent of any existing agency, has been urged in a resolution submitted by Lodge 26. The lodge also recommended unemployment benefits for employes discharged for reasons other than delinquency or misconduct.

Other resolutions opposed a Government economy drive that results in blanket reductions or dismissals; support pending legislation to provide automatic pay increases, and a five-day week without loss of pay; and urge improvement in working conditions for custodial, hospital service, and prison service employes.

Officials announced that the list of convention speakers would include Chairman Ramspeck of the House Civil Service Committee; Harry B. Mitchell, president of the Civil Service Commission; Brig. Gen. Frank T. Hines, veterans' administrator, and Smith W. Purdum, fourth assistant postmaster general.

System Working Well

F. W. Richelderfer, chief of the Weather Bureau, said yesterday the Government's hurricane warning system is working at a new high in efficiency.

The warning service depends on observations reported twice a day by 80 stations in the West Indies and Caribbean and additional observations from ships in the hurricane area, Reichelderfer said.

Reichelderfer said the effectiveness of the system had been shown when a small hurricane crossed Florida early this month. The disturbance was spotted August 8, 175 miles northeast of San Juan, and for the next five days, until it crossed the Florida peninsula, its movements were clocked at hourly intervals by stations all along the route.

Reichelderfer said further hurricane protection had been developed through increased facilities for upper air soundings, and improved radio and teletype communication between the weather stations.

Outing Set for Today

District veterans of the famous Rainbow Division will hold their mid-summer outing this afternoon at the estate of Dr. Albert M. Kloczewski, Herald Harbor, Md. Among those who plan to attend the party are Elmer F. Neagle, national president of the Rainbow Division veterans; James E. Witherite, president of the District chapter, and Bernard V. Rhodes, honorary president and chairman of the outing committee.

Lodge Being Formed

Organization of Lodge 607, American Federation of Government Employes, among custodial workers at Walter Reed Hospital has been announced. Temporary officers include Lonnie Stafford, president; Charles Smith, secretary, and Clifford G. Wilson, treasurer.

ADRIANA

By George Dyer

A Story of Love and Intrigue in Vineyard Sound

Adriana, the girl, puts Garret Marriner to shame when she capably sails Adriana, the yawl, into the stormy night past Cape Higgon to a safer anchorage. Marriner had first met Adriana Blake and her mother when he took the yawl out of Plymouth and ran into a fog, ending up at the private Blake dock. After supper at their home, Adriana and her deerhound visit the boat and Marriner suggests that she learn steering while he improves his navigating, about which he knows almost nothing. But during the night a bad gale blows up and Adriana rows out to say that it is too dangerous there for Marriner's lovely craft, which was an inheritance from his Uncle Nathan. She steers toward Menemsha, meanwhile instructing Marriner in handling the sails.

GEORGE DYER

Chapter 7

THE SKY was black directly overhead, and spits of rain kept pattering on our backs, but in between them it was astonishingly clear all around the horizon. I could make out a light on another sinister cape for which we were steering squarely. It would give three long steady white flashes, and then a shorter red flash. I asked what the red flash meant.

"You're not looking in the right place. Low down, about two points off the port bow," said the girl. "That big light is Gay Head. It's saying: 'You're all right; you're all right; you're all right—but watch out! I like the Gay Head light. It stands there so faithfully on its cliff, looking down on sailormen, and warning them away from the long cruel reef called the Devils Bridge, where the City of Columbus was wrecked, long ago."

"I never thought I'd feel a burning sympathy for the City of Columbus," I said.

Adriana's face turned briefly toward mine.

"You're kidding," she announced, disapprovingly. "But in that wreck 121 people were lost—drowned, frozen, or battered to death on the rocks of Devils Bridge. It happened years ago, in 1884, on a night in January. The water was nearly ice. No one knows why she struck. There was a great sea running—not just an ordinary one, like this—but it was clear, and the moon was shining bright. No one ever found out why she struck."

"You give me a cold grue," I said, "talking about things like that when we're plunging through the pitch dark. God knows where, in peril of our lives."

"We're not in peril any more," said she, "and it's not pitch dark, and I know exactly where we are. Look at all the lights we can see! There's Menemsha; there's Gay Head. That wink over there is the new gas buoy at the end of the Devils Bridge which the fishermen think is perfectly useless. That low steady one is Vineyard Sound lightship, over 12 miles away. Next," she shifted hold on the tiller and swung her right hand in sweeps around the horizon from west to north, "comes Cuttyhunk light. That red blinker is the south range buoy for Quicks Hole. Next—see it? There!—that's the flash of the channel and Robinsons Hole buoy." She put her chin on her right shoulder. "I don't pick up the Middle Ground, but surely you can make out Nobska light, at Woods Hole."

"You certainly know them by their first names," I said, a shade bitterly.

"Oh, it's only that I've sailed these waters all my life," said she simply, and gazed ahead. We wallowed on through the darkness in the clutch of huge rollers.

"I suppose you wouldn't be so calm if we were in a blind fog, as I was yesterday in Robinsons Hole."

"If," observed Adriana shortly, "you aren't lying about the way you came through Robinsons Hole—why, it was the stupidest thing I ever heard of. And also the biggest bit of luck that's happened around here in years."

"Oh?" I said, realizing that I had made an impression.

"Of course. Driving this adorable craft headlong through that gut, with all sails set and the tide behind you. And, worst of all, without knowing where you were within 10 miles!"

"I suppose you'd have known where you were," I said, pricked out of my humble mood.

"Naturally, or else I'd have hove to and found out."

"Asked a cop, or a taxi driver, I presume," said I, with sarcasm intended to be biting.

Adriana threw me a quick look from eyes shadowed by the upflung light of the compass, and said quietly:

"I don't think I could be lost anywhere between the eastern entrance of Nantucket Sound and, say, Block Island. But if I were, I'd ask the bottom."

ooo

I HAD NO comeback to this one, and we were coldly silent for quite a period. At length the girl spoke:

"We're going to round the gas beacon into Menemsha Creek now. Don't be alarmed if it seems a bit ticklish. The channel is very narrow, and the full ebb is pouring out of it against the wind. We'll pass through a little chop, but it's short and doesn't mean anything."

I assured her briefly that I was not alarmed. However, I was everything else possible—cold, stunned, scared, annoyed, humiliated, discouraged, and somewhat sickish.

"We'll swing to port," went on Adriana, with beastly calm, "and reach through the rip between the jetties, and then turn 90 degrees to port again and coast into the Basin. If the place is not full of Portuguese fishermen from New Bedford we'll tie up to the wharf of a friend of mine. Otherwise, we'll have to anchor."

A great black cliff was looming over us on the left side, and we seemed to be about to push over the gas beacon which now danced high over the left bow.

"I'll handle the sheets," said she, "but you'd better run forward and stand by to fend off or let go the anchor when we get in the Basin. It's sure to be crowded, and I'll shout to you what to do and you must do it at once. I think we can make it without coming about."

"Oh, all right," I said, and clawed my way forward. I found some sort of footing in front of the mast, leaned my shoulder blades against it and clung to a couple of wires which felt twanging-taut. I could see absolutely nothing ahead.

"Helm's down!" sang out that clear voice, once more with a horrid ring of delighted excitement.

I felt the invisible deck sink away under my feet. The Adriana leaned heavily under the wind, and plunged into a hellish confusion of spouting water. I was instantly soaked up my legs nearly to the waist. A spidery tower, with a light blinking madly on top, swept by on the left against the dismal sky. Adriana's voice shouted something. I couldn't hear it. It didn't matter. Any fool could see that this was the end of all things.

Then, as by a miracle, we weren't in the raging ocean. The deck righted itself; the pale jib in front of me began to slap my shins. I looked about and saw that we were in some quiet beautiful place, with a distant roar of surf blowing into it. There were lights all about hanging. I could make out, in a tangle in the rigging of innumerable boats. And ahead of us was a dimly lighted pier into which we were definitely going to crash full tilt. But we didn't. We lost speed; we even began to drift astern.

"Can you come aft?" called the girl. "I think we can tie up at my friend's wharf. There seems to be only three boats there now."

At this, a gruff voice shouted from somewhere in the night:

"Hey, dere! No more boats on Hansen's varf. De spiles von't stant it! Who, is dat?"

"Good morning, Captain Matt," the girl answered. "It's Adriana Blake. Haven't you room for us?"

"Liddle Atriana! My Cot! Vat are you doing out on soch a night! And who'ss yawl iss dat? Come in, come in. De varf vill stant it. But you shall be de last. Ve don't know how hart dis vint will blow before daylight."

ooo

WHEN I woke at about ten o'clock I felt as if I'd been born all over again.

Sunlight was pouring straight down the companionway. I could hear the long pulsing boom of heavy breakers close at hand, but the bunk beneath me was scarcely stirring. The air in the cabin smelt deliciously fresh, but I should have preferred a smell of coffee and bacon. I threw back the blankets, sprang to the ladder, and stuck my head out of the hatch.

The rain had gone away. It was an incredibly brilliant morning. The sky was porcelain blue, with disorganized woolly clouds driving across the horizon and a great wind blowing.

The Adriana was tied up near the northern end of Menemsha Basin, the world's snuggest pocket-handkerchief of a harbor. I came up head and shoulders above the cabin roof and looked about in complete delight.

To Be Continued Tomorrow.

Tomorrow's Installment of "ADRIANA" Will be in Section VI of Sunday's Post
